Baylor seeks to pamper president's papers

WACO-Baylor University has named a national steering committee for its proposed George W. Bush Presidential Library Center.

The committee's primary objectives are to oversee the university's formal presidential library planning committee and to direct fund-raising efforts for the library.

While the White House has not announced any decision on the location of the future presidential library, Baylor and Southern Methodist University are widely considered top contenders. The library of the current president's father, George Bush, is located at Texas A&M University in College Station.

In selling Waco as a location, Robert Sloan noted that 80 percent of the state's population lives within 200 miles of Baylor.

First Lady Laura Bush is a graduate of SMU, and the Bushes have several close ties there. However, the Baylor committee is comprised of prominent individuals who have close ties to Baylor and the Bush administration as well. And Baylor is located within close proximity to the Bushes' ranch in Crawford.

Baylor President Robert Sloan has appointed Baylor regents chairman and Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr. as chair of the library committee.

"While we realize that a decision on the site of the George W. Bush Presidential Library is likely several years away, we feel it is important to formalize our process so we are in a position to deliver a well-conceived, well-constructed and financially certain proposal," Sloan said.

In selling Waco as a location, Sloan noted that 80 percent of the state's population lives within 200 miles of Baylor. With the George Bush Library in College Station and the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library in Austin, a George W. Bush Presidential Library at Baylor would create a triangle of presidential libraries within 90 miles of each other, positioning the region as the most important area in the country for presidential research, he declared.

In addition to appointing the national steering committee, Baylor has retained three outside consultants to help guide its process and prepare its formal proposal. The consultants are:

Don Wilson, former archivist of the United States with the U.S. National Archives and Records Administration; former director of the George H.W. Bush Presidential Library Center; and director of the George H.W. Bush Presidential Library Center Foundation.

- ◆ John Fawcett, former director of the Office of the Presidential Library System at the National Archives and Records Administration and former archivist at the Lyndon Baines Johnson and Herbert Hoover presidential libraries.

- ◆ Terry Sullivan, former director of White House Transitions Project and a professor of political science on sabbatical from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Sullivan also will be teaching several courses in political science at Baylor.
