Gallup Poll finds Americans evenly divided on question of gay marriage

WASHINGTON (RNS)-Americans are almost evenly divided on whether they think legal marriage of same-sex partners is acceptable, according to a USA Today/CNN/ Gallup Poll.

Forty-eight percent of respondents said they think permitting gay unions "will change our society for the worse," while 40 percent said gay marriage would have no effect and 10 percent said it would make society better.

The survey also found churchgoers are more often among the percentage of Americans who think society would be worsened by legal marriage of same-sex couples, USA Today reported.

TEXAS BAPTIST FORUM: Highest ambition

The church should offer the greatest example of forgiveness, patience, mercy, love and “watching what you say.” Unfortunately, conflict often occurs between pastor and congregation.

The church, where we preach that no one is perfect, should be a place where we do not expect perfection. But it seems rare that we hear about a loving congregation, whose members and pastor actually get along.

Louisiana College requires 2000 BF&M

PINEVILLE, La. (ABP)-Louisiana College trustees have adopted new policies that give trustees more direct involvement in faculty hiring and make affirmation of Southern Baptists' controversial doctrinal statement an official requirement.

Since 1997, prospective faculty members have been asked informally if they would teach "in harmony" with the Baptist Faith & Message statement, school officials said. The new policy makes affirmation of the more conservative 2000 version of the statement an official policy.

"This simply represents an enhancement of the process we already have," said trustee Ed Tarpley, pastor of Alpine First Baptist Church in Pineville, La.

Fund helps two missionary families

return to field

DALLAS-Texas Baptists are helping support two missionary families through a newly established conduit that funnels money from churches and individuals to former Southern Baptist Convention missionaries.

Four other missionary families are in the process of applying for funding.

Through the funding channel, any church or individual can send money to missionaries who resigned, retired or were terminated due to the International Mission Board's requirement that missionaries affirm the Southern Baptist Convention's 2000 Baptist Faith & Message.

Missouri asks to borrow $1 million

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.-The Missouri Baptist Convention's Executive Board has proposed borrowing up to $1 million to fund its lawsuits against five former convention agencies that declared self-perpetuating boards.

Messengers to the Missouri convention's annual session in St. Louis Nov. 3-5 will be asked to affirm creation of an Agency Restoration Fund, which will be backed by a $1 million line of credit from a bank at prime rate.

The Oct. 9 action was reported in the Pathway, the state convention's new news journal, launched after the Word & Way amended its charter to remove the convention's authority to name trustees.
