

DOWN HOME: OK, so the officer didn't laugh, too_72803

October 14, 2003

Posted: 7/25/03

DOWN HOME: OK, so the officer didn't laugh, too

Except for an encounter with one of Krotz Springs' finest, we had a perfect vacation.

Joanna, Lindsay, Molly and I spent a week at the beach, the favored summer retreat of our teenage girls. The other day, I tried to count; this was the ninth or 10th trip we've taken to the beach. I hope the girls remember these trips as fondly as I remember the vacations my family took when I was a kid.

MARV
KNOX
Editor

Back in the "old days," we lived in the Panhandle, where Daddy was a pastor. The beach seemed a million miles away, so we went camping in the mountains of New Mexico or Colorado. I still favor a mountain vacation—the sound of wind rushing through the pines; the pungent smell of the woods; the sting of icy water when you wade in the streams; the cold nights that induce great sleep.

---

EDITORIAL: Speak the truth or show love? Why can't we do both?_72803

October 14, 2003

Posted: 7/25/03

EDITORIAL: Speak the truth or show love? Why can't we do both?

The folks in Chama, N.M., won't forget Ben Martinez's funeral mass any time soon.

About 200 mourners gathered in the sanctuary of St. Patrick Catholic Church after Martinez died at age 80 last summer. Chances are, they expected to hear the priest, Scott Mansfield, eulogize Martinez as a lifelong Catholic who served his community as a town councilman.

Instead, according to members of the Martinez family, Mansfield stamped their recently departed loved one's passport to hell.

---

Police identify body of Dennehy; Baylor teammate Dotson held_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted: 7/29/03

Police identify body of Dennehy; Baylor teammate Dotson held

By Hannah Lodwick

Associated Baptist Press

WACO, Texas (ABP)—Authorities have positively identified the body of missing Baylor University basketball player Patrick Dennehy.

---

CYBERCOLUMN: From a rock house_duncan_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted 7/29/03

CYBERCOLUMN: From a rock house

By John Duncan

I am sitting here under the old oak tree, pondering an old rock house. An old rock house sits in Pilot Point. The old rock house might be down some dirt road or out in the country or on an asphalt road near the center of town. I know not where that house sits. I do know that on Sept. 14, 1940, Aunt Essie delivered her nephew, Cordell. Cordell had a last name—Parker. That rock house served as conduit of education, values and spiritual roots.

Not long ago, a speech teacher named Cordell Parker died. Cordell taught at Tarrant County College and served as an educator for over 40 years. Today people change jobs faster than a lightning strike. Forty years at the same task and purpose occurs to me as a remarkable feat. In the Summer of 1980, Cordell served as my speech teacher. He loved talking about life's most basic commodity—communication. Communication makes the world go around. Today S-P-E-E-C-H is on my mind.

JOHN DUNCAN

---

Dennehy services set_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted:8/4/03

Dennehy services set

A funeral service for Baylor University basketball player Patrick Dennehy will be held at 11 a.m. Pacific Time Thursday, Aug. 7, at the Jubilee Christian Center in San Jose, Calif.

Cards may be sent to: Family of Patrick Dennehy, c/o Jubilee Christian Center, 175 Nortech Parkway, San Jose, Calif. 95134.

The university will hold a campus memorial service for Dennehy at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 28, in the Truett Seminary Chapel on the Waco campus.

---

Commentary: God's man for two seminaries_stone_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted 8/5/03

Commentary: God's man for two seminaries

By Ted Stone

Eleven years ago, area media accounts of the election of Paige Patterson to the presidency of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary carried the prediction by the more ardent detractors that his coming would result in the death of the Southern Baptist seminary, located in Wake Forest, N.C.

Many denominational loyalists wondered if the hard-driving Texan, who had earned his spurs as a leader in the conservative resurgence, would be a good fit for the more traditional East Coast seminary. After all, he was fresh from the presidency of Criswell College, and some feared that such a background ill-prepared him for the educational challenges of higher education.

Paige Patterson has been God's man for the 11
years spent in the town of Wake Forest, and by God's grace, he will occupy that same special designation at Fort Worth,
"God's man for this special time!"

---

Commentary: Other Baptists and bossy preachers freeman_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted 8/5/03

Commentary: Other Baptists and bossy preachers

By Curtis W. Freeman

Back in 2001, when I still was unpacking boxes from my move to North Carolina from Texas, I received a phone call from the chair of a pulpit committee. "Can you send us a pastor?" asked the voice on the line. "We had a bossy preacher from the seminary, but we want a Duke preacher like the one down the road at Hickory Rock." It was a quick lesson on Baptist politics in the North Carolina Piedmont, put in cornbread language.

Twenty years ago, things were different. In the Southeast, there was pretty much only one theological school Baptist churches turned to when it came to finding a preacher-Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary. But that was before the "conservative resurgence" of the Southern Baptist Convention, also known by moderate Baptists as the "fundamentalist takeover."

---

Cobb                   leaving                   CBF leadership_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted: 8/8/03

Cobb leaving CBF leadership

ATLANTA (ABP)-Reba Cobb, chief operating officer of the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, will leave CBF Sept. 1 to become religious action director for the Children's Defense Fund in Washington, D.C.

Founded in 1973, the Children's Defense Fund is a private non-profit organization that advocates for children's issues.

Cobb, 60, has been with the CBF since 2001. She serves as coordinator for the organization's Resource Center in Atlanta and supervises the 52-person staff.

---

Baylor chaplains honor volunteer for service_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted: 8/8/03

Baylor chaplains honor volunteer for service

By John Hall

Texas Baptist Communications

DALLAS-Baylor University Medical Center chaplains honored a volunteer for completing the Baptist General Convention of Texas Hands-On Ministry training classes with praise and a certificate.

---

Education journal studies Baptist governance_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted: 8/8/03

Education journal studies Baptist governance

By John Pierce

Baptists Today

Tension that sometimes leads to separation between Baptist-related colleges and state Baptist conventions was the focus of a July 4 article in the Chronicle of Higher Education. The writer looked to Georgia and Missouri for the latest examples to support her notion that colleges and conventions are increasingly at odds over trustee control and academic freedom.

---

House amendments called political grandstanding_81103

October 14, 2003

Posted: 8/8/03

House amendments called political grandstanding

By Hannah Lodwick

Associated Baptist Press

WASHINGTON (ABP)-The U.S. House of Representatives has approved two amendments to a spending bill that are intended to protect the Ten Commandments and Pledge of Allegiance.

---

Commission remembered for influence_81103 magazine

October 14, 2003

Posted: 8/8/03

Commission magazine remembered for influence

By Craig Bird

Associated Baptist Press

RICHMOND, Va. (ABP)-The Commission no longer goes to the ends of the earth-at least not the printed Southern Baptist version. What that means for Southern Baptists' efforts to carry out the Great Commission remains to be seen.