

Accrediting agency places Louisiana College on one-year probation for violating standards_122004

December 17, 2004

Posted: 12/17/04

Accrediting agency places Louisiana College on one-year probation for violating standards

By Robert Marus

Associated Baptist Press

PINEVILLE, La. (ABP)—The South's major accrediting agency for schools has placed a Louisiana Baptist college on probation for a year for violating the agency's standards.

Louisiana College officials announced the Pineville, La., school was placed on probation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Members of the association's commission on colleges voted to make the change at their regularly scheduled December meeting in Atlanta.

Probation from the accrediting agency is a more serious sanction than a warning or “notation” on the school's record, but less severe than the full removal of accreditation.

The school will have 12 months to prove it is in compliance with the agency's standards.

Louisiana College has been roiled by controversy for several years, with much of it coming to a head in the past two years as a group of fundamentalists gained a majority on the institution's board of directors.

All board members are appointed by the Louisiana Baptist Convention.

In the past few months, the college's president, chief academic administrator and board chairman have resigned.

Last month—only a week after being introduced to the Louisiana Baptist Convention—the college's newly called president unexpectedly withdrew his application for the job, citing “governance issues.”

Earlier this year, a special committee from the accrediting agency visited the college's campus on a fact-finding mission. Committee members determined Louisiana College was not in compliance with several of the association's standards regarding academic freedom and proper board governance.

“The committee concluded, based upon extensive interviews with members of the board of trustees, senior staff and faculty, that a significant portion of the board of trustees of Louisiana College are influenced if not controlled by the agenda of the Louisiana Inerrancy Fellowship and the Louisiana Baptist Convention,” the SACS report read.

The study team said an agenda from the inerrancy group—established as a political movement within the Louisiana Baptist Convention—had unduly influenced the board's work.

Among the controversies on campus were two trustee-initiated policies many professors said violated academic freedom—a 2003 move to require prior approval of class texts and materials by administrators and more recent actions that made the board more closely involved in faculty hiring and that required new faculty hires to be in agreement with the Southern Baptist Convention's 2000 Baptist Faith & Message statement.

According to a statement released by Louisiana College, Interim President John Traylor said the school will meet that goal.

“It is my opinion that SACS is calling on the institution to recognize the seriousness of the accrediting standards. Trustees, administration and faculty must take the steps necessary to move the college into full compliance, lest we lose membership in SACS,” the statement read.

“The entire college community—trustees, administration, faculty—have committed themselves to the actions necessary to bring Louisiana College into compliance with the standards of accreditation.”

News of religion, faith, missions, Bible study and Christian ministry among Texas Baptist churches, in the BGCT, the Southern Baptist Convention (SBC) and around the world.