GuideStone offers online help. Investors with GuideStone Financial Resources of the Southern Baptist Convention-formerly the SBC Annuity Board-can use the Internet to view online presentations or participate in interactive seminars for retirement planning. Presentations cover key topics for ministers and church employees such as enrollment in the church retirement plan, advantages of consolidating investments and how to know if you are invested appropriately for retirement. For more information on this new service, visit the website at www.guidestone.org or call toll-free at (800) 262-0511.

Retired seminary professor Blevins dies. James Blevins, former professor of New Testament interpretation at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, died July 24 in Louisville, Ky., after a long-term illness. He was 67. Blevins was on Southern Seminary's faculty from 1976 until 1999, when a severe case of diabetes forced him to take early medical retirement. Blevins was widely published on the Book of Revelation, including his 1984 book "Revelation as Drama," and was known for his dramatic presentation of Bible characters.

Veteran missionary Bryant dead at 74. Thurmon Bryant, longtime missionary to Brazil and former senior administrator of the International Mission Board, died July 27 in Fort Worth at age 74. A native of Claud, Okla., Bryant and his wife, the former Doris Morris of Sudan, were appointed by the Foreign Mission Board in 1958. Bryant served 17 years as a field missionary in Brazil and almost 20 years on the mission board staff. He was a graduate of Baylor University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. Prior to missionary appointment, he was pastor of three Texas congregations-Prairie Point Baptist Church in Groesbeck, Friendship Baptist Church in Cleburne and First Baptist Church in Grandview.

ANOTHER VIEW: Morality demands war against AIDS

By Dale Hanson Bourke

When thousands of AIDS experts gathered in Thailand this summer for the International AIDS Conference, they considered economic impacts and political pressures, as well as social issues and cultural barriers.

And no matter what their expertise, they shared the same concern: Although the world is in the throes of the worst health disaster ever known, the average person knows little about it and cares even less.

CYBERCOLUMN: Changes

By Berry D. Simpson

I once heard a motivational speaker say he gave his sales consultants hand-held spotlights for their cars, powered from the cigarette lighter, so they could find unknown houses on new streets by shining the lights on the curb to read the numbers. He said that in sales, if you weren't lost in a new neighborhood looking for an unfamiliar house at least once a week, you weren't serious about your business because you weren't pushing out beyond the familiar.

What he said was true for more than just sales. If I'm not occasionally lost and unsure, I'm probably not growing as a person.

DOWN HOME: TP can't wipe pain of 'lasts'

Within the week, we'll pull out the camera, pose our "baby," Molly, beside a dining room chair and repeat a ritual we began 15 years ago.

Since her big sister, Lindsay, started kindergarten, their mother and I have taken pictures of the girls standing beside a chair every year on the first day of school.

When they were little, the chair provided a useful object of scale. By comparing their height to the back of the chair, we could tell how much they grew from year to year. Long after their steady height rendered the comparison moot, we maintained the tradition, just to keep a chronicle of the passage of time.
