CYBERCOLUMN: You're at church now

By Brett Younger

The rain started before we left Fort Worth and continued almost all the way. At Texarkana, I optimistically switched to "intermittent," but we spent most of the day on the fast end of the wiper speed dial. I announced several times—to no one's amusement—"The last time it rained like this Noah built himself a boat."

At Hope, Ark., the wiper blade on the passenger's side decided it had had enough and started unraveling. By the time we got to my parents' house, the wiper was almost completely gone.
