Teens illustrate what they need spiritually

By Miranda Bradley

AUSTIN—A roomful of parents and youth Bible study leaders waited to hear Bryan Hall of Woodlawn Baptist Church in Austin teach on how to encourage a teen's spirituality. They didn't realize their lesson would come primarily from the teens themselves.

The seminar, held in conjunction with the Baptist General Convention of Texas annual meeting, opened with an exercise where each person was asked to list what they would like their teens to take with them to college.

CYBER COLUMN: God is at work

By Jeanie Miley

Stepping onto the elevator in the hospital, I pushed the button to the emergency room and leaned against the wall while the elevator carried me down to the basement. I had no idea what was facing me on that warm fall morning, but a phone call had turned my world upside down. I was amazed at how calm I was.

Life has a way of walloping you suddenly, now and then. And at other times, things that have been brewing for a long time suddenly make you realize you've arrived at the place you've been traveling to for a very long time. As far as I can tell, no one makes it out of here without encounters with scary times and hard times.

Joel Engle was one of the speakers who headlined this year's Valley Youth Explosion in Weslaco. More than 3,100 youth came to hear Engle, former Harlem Globetrotter Melvin Adams, former San Francisco 49er Tyrone Smith and evangelist Tiny Dominguez speak. Ninety-one spiritual decisions were made during the three-day event.

The group Salvador performed the last night of the event. Speaking in schools across the area, the event reached more than 47,000 students.

Area youth ministers, including Moses Medina of First Church in Weslaco, organized the event.

AUSTIN—It's time for African-Americans “to show up, pay up and speak up” in the life of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, Michael Bell told the 2005 meeting of the Texas Baptist African-American Fellowship at Austin's

Rosewood Avenue Baptist Church.

Speaking on the eve of his election as the Texas convention's first African-American president, Bell closed the fellowship rally by challenging participants to “walk through the door that has finally opened” because “a lot of people-of all races-have worked too long and too hard for make this day happen.”

BWA leader brings more than fraternal greetings to BGCT

By Craig Bird

AUSTIN-Denton Lotz, general secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, presented Baptist General Convention of Texas Executive Director Charles Wade with a framed membership certificate signifying the recent acceptance of the BGCT as a full member in the 100-year-old Baptist fellowship.

Lotz noted when the BWA was founded 100 years ago, “85 percent of the world's Christians lived in Europe and the United States, but now 60 percent of Christians live in the southern hemisphere. There are 400 million believers in Africa, 550 million in Latin America and 360 million in Asia.

Opportunity knocks during CityReach

By Miranda Bradley

AUSTIN-Opportunity knocked this week for Eva Agueera, a five-year Austin resident. When she answered the door, Robert Flores stood with a Bible in hand. After a brief conversation in her apartment doorway, Agueera accepted Christ as her Savior.

Agueera's was the first home visited by Flores, a member of the Iglesia Bautista Principe De Paz evangelism team. The team of 20 meets three times a week for training so they can make the most of their door-to-door ministry.
