Sloan to step down as Baylor president, assume chancellor's role

By Marv Knox

Editor

WACO-Baylor University President Robert Sloan will step down June 1, concluding one of the stormiest periods in the 160-year-old school's history, an era marked by expansion but also by division.

Former Texas pastor finds Hong Kong a fertile field for evangelism

By Orville Scott

Special to the Baptist Standard

Harry Lucenay, former pastor of First Baptist churches of Longview and San Antonio, said he witnessed and preached to more non-Christians in his first year as pastor of Kowloon International Baptist Church of Kowloon Tong, Hong Kong, than during 30 years as a pastor in the United States.

Did God send tsunamis to punish persecutors of Christians?

By Ken Camp

Managing Editor

DALLAS-Experiencing God author Henry Blackaby believes the tsunamis that hit South Asia were God's punishment of an area where Christians have experienced particularly intense persecution. But some missions experts with links to the region question both his theology and his assertions about persecution.

CYBERCOLUMN: My season on the brink

By Brett Younger

“We don’t have a coach for your son Caleb’s team. I don’t know what we’re going to do. I guess children better get used to being rejected, but this isn’t that hard. The coach only has to be at one practice and one game a week. You’d think someone would think these kids are worth two hours. It makes me want to cry.”

The 19th century Danish philosopher Soren Kierkegaard suggested that there are moments that call for a “leap of faith,” but this may have been more of a “look before you make a leap of studipity” moment.
