RIGHT or WRONG? Homosexuals in the church

Please help our congregation answer a couple of questions we have been discussing: "To what degree should homosexuals be accepted in church? And what role(s) should they be allowed to take in church?"

The pork chop

By Jinny Henson

Scientists recently discovered falling in love produces the equivalent of an amphetamine-induced high. I realize after 12 years of marriage that no human would voluntarily make this commitment unless they were smoking crack. Which leads me to this conclusion: God is pretty smart.

I'd done them; the blind dates. You go to be polite and have as much in common with the guy as the UnaBomber. My parents met on a blind date, and who was I to tempt fate should history repeat itself? I'm no obsessive-compulsive, but when you're a girl dealing with something as serious as love here, you have to touch every light switch twice and avoid the cracks in the ground or you might just miss "the one."

Last of Arizona Baptist fraud convicts sentenced to prison

By Hannah Elliott

Associated Baptist Press

PHOENIX (ABP)—One of the most egregious cases of fraud in non-profit history came to a close Feb. 2, when the former treasurer of the Baptist Foundation of Arizona was sentenced.

Donald Deardoff, 49, was ordered to serve four years in prison and pay $159 million to victims of an investment scam. He received the sentence after pleading guilty in 2001 to two counts of fraud. Four other former foundation employees were also sentenced to lesser punishments Feb. 2.

Community service makes impact on teens' faith development

By Ken Camp

WACO—Serving meals to homeless people at a church-sponsored shelter can have a greater impact than sitting in a pew every Sunday morning on how a teenager's faith develops, a new study has concluded.

“Involvement in community service is far more significant to the faith development of teens than involvement in worship,” said Michael Sherr, assistant professor in the School of Social Work at Baylor University.

Healthy families bring others closer to Christ

SAN ANTONIO—The peace Christ offers draws people to him—if they aren't driven away by the conflict in Christians' lives, David Hormachea, host of the Vision Para Vivir media ministry, told participants at the Hispanic Evangelism Conference.

Non-Christians want the peace and joy Christ offers through a relationship with him, but sometimes they are turned off when they look at the family lives of people who call themselves Christians, Hormachea told the conference, sponsored by the Baptist General Convention of Texas. They see broken families, divorced spouses and fighting children and wonder how powerful the gospel can be, he added.

AUSTIN—Gov. Rick Perry’s proposal to sell the lottery just doesn’t add up, according to Texas Baptist gambling opponents.

Suzii Paynter, director of the Texas Christian Life Commission, and Weston Ware, legislative spokesman for Texans Against Gambling, are two of many bipartisan leaders who questions Perry’s logic in wanting to sell the lottery to a private group a year after the lottery recorded its highest sales and when the state has a $14 billion surplus.

Aggies in New Orleans see big picture of God's work

Louisiana Baptist Convention

NEW ORLEANS—Texas A&M University students from First Baptist Church of College Station see their part in rebuilding New Orleans much like the inner workings of the engineering systems they study—a small component in the larger machine that God is operating in New Orleans.

“We came to do whatever we could in four days,” recent A&M graduate Emily Guevara said. “Knowing that others will come behind us and continue the work makes us know that this is not about us; it’s about what God is doing.”
