CYBER COLUMN: Being Jesus to the Untrustable Generation

By Jinny Henson

Peanut butter and jelly. The combination of this salty-sweet concoction was first documented in World War II. Soldiers mixed jelly in their peanut butter rations to make swallowing easier. Returning from the war, these heroes brought back victory as well as a taste for these sandwiches.

Then in the late 1960s a combination of kitsch and kitchen hit the market with the culinary triumph: Goober. I never acquired the palette for Goober. The flavors far too prematurely intermingled. Like day-old nachos or wet beach towels in the car. It just never jived in my mouth. Obviously it jazzed someone's taste buds, as the product born the year before I was remains a staple in grocery stores across the country.

God's unique son

- Matthew 1:18-2:3, 7-11

By Travis Frampton

We have all wondered at some point in our lives what God looks like. Theologians have debated the question, along with the nature and identity of God, for centuries. A couple of years ago, I thought it would be interesting to ask my youngest son, who was then 4 years old, his opinion. Stopped at an intersection waiting for a green light, I looked at him through the rear-view mirror and posed the question.

Student missionaries discover Christ's presence while cleaning toilets

By Jessica Dooley

Communications Intern

The ideal summer vacation usually doesn't involve cleaning restrooms or talking to families of prisoners every day. But for more than 160 college students, this is exactly what they believe God wanted them to do.

Through the Baptist General Convention of Texas' Go Now Missions program, 167 college students devoted their summer to spreading the gospel. Some had the opportunity to minister overseas or around the nation; others served in Texas.

RIGHT or WRONG? Welcoming the disabled

A disabled friend told me: “Your church is not friendly to people with disabilities. If the Americans with Disabilities Act could be applied, your congregation would be closed down.” If she’s right, what have I missed theologically and ethically about our church?

Baptist Briefs

Some SBC leaders endorse blog. Several prominent Baptist leaders have publicly endorsed a groundbreaking blog operated by reform-minded pastors within the Southern Baptist Convention. The endorsers include the presidents of three SBC entities and a college president—Morris Chapman, president of the SBC’s Executive Committee; Thom Rainer, president of LifeWay Christian Resources; Jerry Rankin, president of the SBC’s International Mission Board; and David Dockery, president of Union University. All have posted messages of support for SBCOutpost.com. The weblog, previously run by Georgia pastor Marty Duren, relaunched in June as a collaborative site with the goal of becoming the “premier site for Southern Baptist news and commentary.” All of the bloggers are conservatives and have been involved in efforts to reform the Southern Baptist Convention, which most say has become too narrow and moribund under the leadership of an older generation of biblical inerrantists.

NAMB plans to sell FamilyNet. Southern Baptists’ North American Mission Board plans to sell its FamilyNet to Atlanta pastor Charles Stanley’s In Touch Ministries. NAMB trustees reportedly voted unanimously Aug. 8 to accept a letter of intent from In Touch outlining the ministry’s intent to buy the television network. Under terms of the letter, NAMB and In Touch Ministries will work together to evaluate and negotiate the planned sale and purchase of FamilyNet, and finalize details for the sale on or before Oct. 31.

Black churches face challenges in maintaining musical tradition

By Bob Faw

Religion & Ethics NewsWeekly

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (RNS)—Music, for many, is at the heart of the black worship experience.

“Music comes as a softener of people,” said Frank Thomas, pastor of Mississippi Boulevard Christian Church in Memphis, Tenn. “It allows me to gradually open myself to receive the word. That’s why you have so much music in church, because people can’t just receive ... the raw word.”

Glen McMillan leads the choir at Concord Baptist Church of Christ in Brooklyn, N.Y.

The Mr. and Mrs. Happy Handbook: Everything I Know About Love and Marriage by Steve Doocy (William Morrow)

Nonfiction has come a long way from the inner lives of grasshoppers and the complexity of moon rocks.

In The Mr. & Mrs. Happy Handbook, a reindeer falls from the sky and dents the family car, an anaconda is under the patio, author Steve Doocy and his wife, Kathy, end up spending their honeymoon at a remote leper colony, and concerned kids are asking about the birds and the bees—and the carrot. Try explaining that one.

The logo for "Off the Bookshelf" features the words "Off the" in a small, red, sans-serif font stacked vertically to the left of the word "Bookshelf" in a large, bold, white, sans-serif font. Below "Bookshelf" is the tagline "What's everyone reading anyway?" in a smaller, blue, sans-serif font. The entire logo is contained within a thin black rectangular border.

What's everyone reading anyway?

What are you reading that other Texas Baptists would find helpful? Send suggestions and reviews to books@baptiststandard.com.

In this laugh-out-loud book about married life, Doocy, co-host of Fox and Friends, shares the nitty-gritty about love, married life, family and what to do when the neighbors' kid starts foaming at the mouth. Blame it on the Easter bunny.
