

Churches see themselves as missions-sending entities

July 6, 2007
Posted: 7/06/07

Churches see themselves as missions-sending entities

By John Hall

Texas Baptist Communications

NOXVILLE, Tenn.—While Baptist missiologists and prognosticators are declaring church-based missions the future of global outreach, some pastors believe it's the present, as their congregations serve around the world.

Although the evidence is largely anecdotal, many Baptists believe churches doing mission work overseas without the help of missions boards, agencies or parachurch organizations is on the rise. The trend began with congregations taking short-term mission trips, but it has shifted toward churches that send members to the mission field for longer periods of time.

Greg Adams from Cottonwood
Baptist Church in Dublin ministers to a woman who lives in Asia. The church, which directly supports missionaries around the world, has long-term missions commitments to several people groups around the globe.

Back to the future, as missionaries raise their own financial support

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

Back to the future, as missionaries raise their own financial support

By Jennifer Harris

Missouri Word & Way

Career missionaries may be cutting the middleman from the flow of missions dollars, say experts in the study of mission trends. While denominational agencies and missions partners will not be out of the picture, their roles may change—and perhaps already are.

Larry and Sarah Ballew serve in Macau as affiliates in the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship As You Go program. The Ballews raise their own financial support, relying on relationships with churches and individuals in the States to stay in Macau. The Ballews already had been in Macau several years before working with CBF.

Technology changes the way missionaries work

July 6, 2007
Posted: 7/06/07

Technology changes the way missionaries work

By Hannah Elliott

Associated Baptist Press

NEW YORK (ABP)—Most Baptist missions leaders agree technology has changed the face of missions. What they don't agree on is what it has changed the most.

Some claim centralized integration of information has radically reshaped the mission process. Others think easier and expedited communication has changed the very nature of field work. Still others credit visual and audio media with changing the fund-raising, recruiting and promotional landscape forever.

What is the future of missions?

July 6, 2007
Posted: 7/06/07

Southern Baptist Missionary Scott Bradford joins a friend for a traditional African tea ceremony known as “warga.” The two-hour ceremony takes place three times a day and consists of three rounds of tea, each progressively sweeter than the last. Short-term volunteer trips cannot take the place of this kind of “incarnational” presence by career missionaries, according to Ed Stetzer, director of LifeWay Research. (IMB Photo)

What is the future of missions?

By Ken Camp

Managing Editor

As churches and individual Christians demand more hands-on, practical connection to missions, some Baptists are questioning whether a missions-by-proxy approach—churches supporting professional career missionaries sent by large denominational agencies— has a future.

Count Ken Hall, president of Buckner International, among them.

See Related Articles:

- What is the future of missions?
 - Churches see themselves as missions-sending entities
 - Back to the future, as missionaries raise their own financial support
 - Technology changes the way missionaries work
 - Embracing the World: The Church and Global Mission in the 21st Century

On the Move

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

On the Move

- Lisa Bonnet to First Church in Evant as youth minister.
- Bob Elliott to Dogwood Hills Church in Woodville as intentional interim pastor.
- H.B. Graves to Barre, Vt., as missionary and seminary teacher.
- Martha Kate Hall to Northside Church in Corsicana as minister of preschool and children.

No holiday for Texas Baptist disaster relief workers

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

No holiday for Texas Baptist disaster relief workers

By Barbara Bedrick

Texas Baptist Communications

WICHITA FALLS—A half-dozen Texas Baptist Men disaster relief crews restored homes and hope during the July 4 holiday as heavy rain and flooding continued to ravage the state.

The Baptist General Convention of Texas Disaster Response Team also began processing family aid requests as BGCT church strategists assessed family needs.

Texas Tidbits

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

Texas Tidbits

Baylor School of Social Work named partner. For the first time, the Baylor University School of Social Work has been named a partner school by the national Cooperative Baptist Fellowship. The School of Social Work offers bachelor's and master's degrees in social work. It also participates in a program to offer a master of social work/master of divinity degree with Baylor's Truett Theological Seminary, which also is a CBF partner school.

Guajardo leads CBF Texas. Alcides Guajardo of Mineral, immediate past president of the Hispanic Baptist Convention of Texas, was elected moderator of the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship of Texas at the national CBF general assembly June 28. He takes the place of Ronald Edwards of Goliad, who died this spring. Other officers are Jorene Swift of Fort Worth, moderator-elect, and Ken Huggins of Huntsville, recording secretary. New members of the CBF Texas coordinating council are Burt Burleson, Waco; Robert Cepeda, Los Fresnos; Sandra Cisneros, Victoria; Joe Fields, Lewisville; Charles Higgs, Stephenville; Fred Hobbs, Victoria; Judy Joy, Covington; Ella Prichard, Corpus Christi; Jesse Rincones, Lubbock; Taylor Sandlin, San Angelo; Ross Shelton, Castroville; Carolyn Strickland, Dallas; Andrew Villarreal, San Antonio; and Jorge Zapata, Harlingen. Texans elected to national CBF positions include Rodney McGlothlin of College Station, Janie Sellers of Abilene and Philip Wise of Lubbock, coordinating council; Debbie Ferrier of Houston, nominating committee; Tommy Hiebert of San Angelo, Church Benefits Board; and Patricia Ayres of Austin and Os Chrisman of Dallas, CBF Foundation.

TOGETHER: Immigration ministries merit support

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

TOGETHER:

Immigration ministries merit support

Texas has a long history of immigration. U.S. Anglos, led by Stephen F. Austin, entered the northern Mexican province of Texas in 1822. Many settlers came with Mexican authorization, but many more came on their own without legal papers.

Now, we are seeing many from Mexico and other nations come into Texas—both legally and illegally.

Executive Director
BGCT Executive Board

There is no question the United States must secure its borders, and that is something for which the federal government has responsibility.

Baptist churches, on the other hand, have a responsibility to tell and to show people they are loved by God and he desires a personal relationship with them through his Son, Jesus Christ.

Trust level in religion at near-record low

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

Trust level in religion at near-record low

By Michelle Rindels

Religion News Service

WASHINGTON (RNS)—Americans trust the military and the police significantly more than the church and organized religion, a new Gallup Poll reveals.

Only 46 percent of respondents said they had either a “great deal” or “quite a lot” of confidence in the church, compared with 69 percent who said they trusted the military and 54 percent who trust police officers.

BaptistWay Bible Series for July 15: A life going absolutely nowhere

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

BaptistWay Bible Series for July 15

A life going absolutely nowhere

- Ecclesiastes 1:1-11

By Toby Castleberry

Bible Studies for Life Series for July 15: Sharing Christ with all people

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

Bible Studies for Life Series for July 15

Sharing Christ with all people

- Acts 6:1-7; 9:36-43; 11:29-30

By David Harp

Explore the Bible Series for July 15: Zechariah calls us to repentance

July 6, 2007

Posted: 7/06/07

Explore the Bible Series for July 15

Zechariah calls us to repentance

- Zechariah 1:1-3:10

By Kathryn Aragon

First Baptist Church, Duncanville

“Return to me,” declares the Lord Almighty, “and I will return to you” (1:3). The harsh opening belies the gentleness of Zechariah’s message. Instead of condemning us for turning away from God, Zechariah reminds us that God remembers his people and his promises. It’s a fitting message from a man whose name means "The Lord Remembers."