Embracing the World: The Church and Global Mission in the 21st Century

Editor's note: Below are the remarks made by CBF Global Missions Coordinator Rob Nash during the Friday afternoon session of the CBF General Assembly in Washington, D.C. Exact wording of this sermon is subject to change during delivery of the message.

CBF Global Missions Coordinator

It was as clear and clarion a call to global mission as I have ever heard. The man who uttered it was short and stocky, a former imam at a mosque in the Middle East who had managed to plant a Baptist church in the middle of a challenging and difficult urban context. The two of us were participants in a church planting conference at the Arab Baptist Theological Seminary in Beirut. Among our number were a sprinkling of Americans and Europeans and a group of about 15 church planters from Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon and Iraq.

DALLAS (ABP)—A Bible college with close ties to the Southern Baptist fundamentalist movement is in danger of losing its accreditation due to financial problems.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools announced June 28 on its website that it had placed Criswell College on a one-year probation period. The news was publicized July 5 by the Dallas Morning News and SBC Outpost, a blog run by several Southern Baptist pastors disgruntled with the denomination's leadership.

RIGHT or WRONG? Baby shower for unwed mother

One of the unmarried teenage girls in our church is pregnant. Should we give her a baby shower, or does that send the wrong message to other young girls?

Texas Baptist Convention

AUSTIN—The Hispanic Baptist Convention of Texas is launching an effort to build homes for retired pastors.

During its annual meeting, the convention passed a motion to create a network of construction teams that would help build homes for retired pastors. The network will be divided into three groups—one that raises money to buy materials, one that builds homes and one that identifies candidates for houses.

WASHINGTON (ABP)—Moderate and progressive Baptists continue to grow in their theoretical support for women as pastors, but their churches remain far behind in practice. That’s one conclusion from the second annual “State of Women in Baptist Life” report, released by Baptist Women in Ministry.

Authors Pam Durso and Eileen Campbell-Reed released the report at the organization’s annual meeting, held in conjunction with the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship general assembly in Washington.

Historian urges ‘true Baptists’ to reclaim prophetic role

By Robert Marus

Associated Baptist Press

WASHINGTON (ABP)—One of the most prominent historians of American evangelicalism called on “true Baptists” to re-assert their prophetic role “as watchmen on the wall of separation between church and state.”

Randall Ballmer, a history professor at Columbia University, told more than 550 supporters of the Baptist Joint Committee for Religious Liberty that many of America’s Baptists, in recent decades, have “lost their way.”

CBF panelists urge Baptists to see ‘humanity’ of AIDS crisis

By Jennifer Harris

WASHINGTON (ABP)—AIDS asks one question: Are you human? That’s what Genie Hargrove told participants in a Cooperative Baptist Fellowship panel discussion on HIV/AIDS. Churches must see the humanity behind the crisis, she said.

Hargrove, pastor of Beulah Baptist Church in Devereux, Ga., said she gained that perspective when she saw the AIDS memorial quilt. The quilt, an ongoing community art project, is a series of 12-foot “blocks” made of three-foot-by-eight-foot panels. Each panel memorializes the life of someone who died of AIDS.

WASHINGTON (ABP)—The key to ministry in Jesus’ name—even in difficult and dangerous places—is to “show up,” Luran Bethell told participants in the William H. Whitsitt Baptist Heritage Society annual meeting.

Bethell, an American Baptist missionary who has spent most of her adult life ministering to and rescuing women from prostitution and sexual trafficking, received the Whitsitt Society’s annual Courage Award. The group met during the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship general assembly in Washington, June 28.

CBF considers UN campaign to fight poverty, hunger & disease

By Greg Warner & Matt Kennedy

Associated Baptist Press

WASHINGTON (ABP)—The Cooperative Baptist Fellowship at its general assembly took the first step toward joining the United Nations' campaign against global poverty and disease, called the Millennium Development goals.

In a break from business-as-usual during the Fellowship's national meeting, participants voted overwhelmingly to instruct their governing body to consider ways CBF can join other Christian groups to reach the United Nations' Millennium Development goals.

CBF leaders endorse New Baptist Covenant

By Greg Warner

Associated Baptist Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. (ABP)—Leaders of the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship endorsed the New Baptist Covenant June 27, saying the mission of the diverse Covenant coalition is consistent with the Fellowship's core values.

The New Baptist Covenant, launched by former president and Baptist layman Jimmy Carter last April, is a broad-based initiative to improve the image of Baptists in North America and unite the majority of those Baptists across racial lines into a loose-knit network committed to the gospel message of Jesus and to addressing social ills.

CBF moderator McCall says God's covenant gives Christians responsibility

By Marv Knox

WASHINGTON (ABP)—God's covenant with Christians "places the responsibility for being the presence of Christ squarely on our shoulders," Emmanuel McCall told participants at the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship general assembly June 28.

God is a covenant-keeping God, insisted McCall, the Fellowship's moderator and pastor of The Fellowship Baptist Group in suburban Atlanta. He cited several covenants recorded in the Old Testament but stressed God sealed the "new covenant"—God's most precious pact—with the life and atoning death of Jesus.

DAKAR, Senegal—Each summer for the past eight years, Lance Bedford has walked the beaches of Africa's westernmost point.

He watches his step to avoid sharp objects, trash or fish heads thrown from the boats lining the beach after the day's haul. But Bedford really watches the people, the Lebou fisherman of Senegal, and prays they will have an openness to hear the gospel. They are the reason he returns, year after year.
