TOGETHER: Churches need ‘Jesus kind’ of leaders

One of the recurring concerns in church life is moving effectively toward the future. Who will lead the way? What role does the pastor have? What is the role of deacons and church leaders? How does the staff fit into the process in churches with multiple ministers? These issues will always be with us.

In my book, The Jesus Principle, I address these matters . Here are some principles:

- The only thing worse for a church than a dictatorial pastor is a ## pastor who won't lead.

When a church calls a pastor, they expect spiritual leadership. They want maturity and sensitivity in their pastor—not arrogance and a “my way or the highway” attitude. They feel they deserve someone who has spent enough time in prayer, Bible study and service that they can have confidence in his or her leadership. But no pastor can give effective leadership if church members squabble over every attempt to move forward. Both pastor and congregation need to give thanks to God for each other.

CYBER COLUMN: Twenty years in one place

By John Duncan

I'm sitting here under the old oak tree, thumbing through an old Bible. It is a wide-margin brown calf-skin Cambridge Bible. Old, yellowed tape lines the Bible with notes, quotes and a date written in the front on a leafy page—July, 1984. I bought it as a seminary student and paid $70 for it when I worked at a Christian bookstore.

For years when I used that Bible to read, to study and to preach, I would write notes in the margin, tape quotes and pen notes in the front and back.

BELTON—God designed each person exactly as he wanted and has plans for each individual, Victor Rodriguez, pastor of South San Filadelfia Baptist Church in San Antonio, told participants at the Baptist General Convention of Texas Hispanic Youth and Singles Congreso.

Unfortunately, many people easily forget that notion when they look in the mirror, he said. They focus on what they see as their faults and weaknesses. They listen to the criticism of others and allow it to affect the way they view themselves.

Participants at the Texas Hispanic Youth and Singles Congreso join in worship.

CYBER COLUMN: About Alice

By Brett Younger

I used to alternate between reading “Christian” books and “non-Christian” books, but I don’t do that anymore. The problem with the practice is that “Christian” books often suffer by comparison. Too many are passionless and dull—the opposite of what a book that has anything to do with Christ should be. About Alice will never be on the shelf of any Christian bookstore, but it’s passionate, funny and sacred. It’s also the saddest, loveliest story I’ve read in a long time.

About Alice is Calvin Trillin’s heartbreaking portrait of his wife Alice—who died in 2001 after a long struggle with lung cancer. I didn’t cry when I read

About Alice. At least not the second time through. Not much anyway.

ATLANTA (ABP) — Some of the Southern Baptist Convention's most prominent bloggers reacted positively to a summit they held with former President Jimmy Carter May 17 in Atlanta.

Carter and the leaders discussed building a broad range of Baptist support for an unprecedented gathering of Baptists in North America, set for next year in Georgia's capital city. The "Celebration of a New Baptist Covenant" is scheduled for next January.

HOUSTON (ABP)—The front-runner among potential Republican presidential nominees used a speech at Houston Baptist University to explain his views on abortion rights and other controversial social issues.

But the moderately pro-choice, pro-gay-rights positions former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani staked out in his appearance at the Texas Baptist school still may prove problematic as he attempts to convince social conservatives that he's their best choice.

WACO—Successful congregations do two things well; they provide people with meaning and with a sense of belonging, said religious researcher Kevin Dougherty.

“To succeed, a church must provide meaning. It must make a compelling case there is something worth believing—worth sacrificing for,” said Dougherty, assistant professor of sociology at Baylor University and a researcher in the school’s Institute for the Studies of Religion.

Jury selection in the convention’s lawsuit against Windermere Baptist Conference Center is set to begin on Oct. 23, with the trial scheduled to

By Hannah Elliott

Associated Baptist Press

WARSAW (ABP)—Critics of the World Congress on Families called it homophobic and unrealistic. Supporters saluted the recent congress—the fourth such global gathering, which played to a sympathetic audience in conservative Poland—for proclaiming the family unit as the only hope for economic and spiritual growth in Europe.

In each case, women are caught in the crosshairs of the debate—portrayed either as saviors of civilization or victims of conservative dogma.
