

Church greeter has firm grip on thousands of names

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Church greeter has firm grip on thousands of names

By Dee Anne Finken

Religion News Service

ANCOUVER, Wash. (RNS)—Some people preach. Others bear witness to their faith with a song of praise.

Rich Liedtke ministers with his hands. That is, he offers a firm, two-handed grip that lasts long enough for him to look straight into a churchgoer's eyes, memorize the face, and announce cheerfully: "Hi, I'm Rich. And you are?"

Rich Liedtke greeted Kelli Wright at the Church of God
in Vancouver,
Wash. Liedtke has memorized the names of more than 3,000 people who come through the church doors;
Wright was the 3,000th.
(RNS photo/Beth Nakamura/The Oregonian)

Lewisville volunteers share pure water and Living Water in

Guatemala

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Truett
King of First Baptist Church in Lewisville reads a Bible story during Vacation
Bible School, part of the church's recent mission trip to Guatemala.
(See Marv Knox's Down Home column for a personal glimpse into the Guatemala trip)

Lewisville volunteers share pure water and Living Water in Guatemala

By Marv Knox

Editor

ZACAPA, Guatemala—Members of First Baptist Church in Lewisville delivered both Living Water and pure water during a late-fall mission trip to an orphanage in Guatemala.

They told the children about Jesus, the Living Water, who can quench their spiritual thirst. But they also completed a filtration system that now purifies the orphanage's parasite-laced water supply.

Brittainy Holmes of First Baptist Church in Lewisville shows Christ's love to a girl in an orphanage in Zacapa, Guatemala, during a mission trip coordinated by Buckner International. The church is sending three teams a year to the state-run orphanage.

Howard Payne coeds mentor girls at juvenile correctional facility

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Howard Payne coeds mentor girls at juvenile correctional facility

By George Henson

Staff Writer

BROWNWOOD—Each week, 39 Howard Payne University students travel a few miles down the road to another world. They visit the Ron Jackson State Juvenile Correctional Complex to show girls there how to experience the different life that Jesus offers.

Students Chassidy Carroll and Chaley Perkins share their lives with girls who need positive role models. Carroll, who helped begin the program three years ago, now mentors four girls during her twice-a-week trips to the facility.

Groups say hunger stats, food prices up

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Groups say hunger stats, food prices up

By Heather Donckels

Religion News Service

WASHINGTON (RNS)—While millions of Americans stock their kitchens for holiday feasts, many groups are concerned about people who will go hungry during the festive season—and in the weeks and months to come.

Inflation has made food more expensive, making it harder for families to put food on the table and more difficult for food banks to keep their shelves stocked.

Persecutionâ€™s blessing: church growth in India

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Persecution’s blessing: church growth in India

By Lance Wallace

Cooperative Baptist Fellowship

HYDERABAD, India (ABP)—Sam Bandela has worked five years in the mountainous central region of India. Even as tsunami relief and personal challenges intervened, he continued to find local partners, train indigenous church planters and fund development projects in the largely Hindu region.

Finally, he is seeing results.

Sam Bandela (right) works with local pastors in India such as Narayan
Paul (left).
(Randy Durham
photo/CBF)

Texas Baptist Forum

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Texas Baptist Forum

Ominous trend

What a commentary on American Christians! We gave more during the Great Depression to win the world to Jesus than we are giving now.

• Jump to online-only letters below

Letters are welcomed. Send them to marvknox@baptiststandard.com; 250 words maximum.

“This election, the candidates are talking so much about faith that one would think they wanted to be in the College of Cardinals rather than the Hall of Presidents.”

Jonathan Turley

George Washington University
professor (USA Today/RNS)

“We are not preaching any type of civil disobedience. We’re just simply saying if someone comes to us and they’re in need of food, they’re in need of going to the doctor, we’re not going to take the time to look for a green card. We’re going to minister and show them Christ’s love.”

Robert Wilson

Ardmore, Okla., pastor, explaining an Oklahoma Baptist resolution that vowed to continue working with immigrants despite a state law that makes it illegal to aid or assist undocumented immigrants (Daily Oklahoman/RNS)

“Everything she does and says reflects on her husband’s ministry, and I don't think the men understand the stress that places on a woman. Their whole identity can be wrapped up in being the pastor’s wife, and they begin to lose themselves.”

Ginger Kolbaba

Co-author of a novel about four pastors’ wives (Leadership/RNS)

We have been warned repeatedly that God will move on and find others more obedient to his command to take the gospel. But we continue to turn inward and become more and more self-absorbed with meeting our own needs and those of our churches than with sacrificing to take the good news to those who have yet to hear.

No wonder, according to world-watchers, the center of the Christian faith has now moved to the Southern Hemisphere.

Baylor and Texas Baptist Men bring clean water to Mongolian town

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

A Baylor University team partnered with Texas Baptist Men to bring water filtration systems and water testing to a rural village in northern Mongolia. Pictured are (left to right) Dick Talley, Ron Mathis, and Leo Smith, all from Texas Baptist Men; Governor Khayankhirvaa of Darkhan, Mongolia; and Rene Massengale, Michelle Nemec, and Stacy Pfluger from Baylor University.

Baylor and Texas Baptist Men bring clean water to Mongolian town

By Matt Pene

Baylor University

KHONGOR, Mongolia—A village in central Mongolia that suffers from extensive water and environmental contamination soon may see better days ahead, thanks to the work of Baylor University researchers and Texas Baptist Men.

Researchers have completed one phase of the Baylor in Mongolia project. They identified about 1,000 people in Khongor who have been become sick due to environmental contamination from industrial mining. About 70 percent of the households in that town have at least one sick person—a crisis that has drawn attention from the World Health Organization.

Diverse group of Christians seeks better relationship with Muslims

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Diverse group of Christians seeks better relationship with Muslims

By Adelle M. Banks

Religion News Service

WASHINGTON (RNS)—A wide range of Christian theologians and leaders have endorsed a document calling for increased efforts to work with Muslims for peace and justice. The move responds to an earlier call from Muslim leaders seeking common ground.

The new document, “Loving God and Neighbor Together: A Christian Response to ‘A Common Word Between Us and You,’” was signed by about 300 Christians and published in a Nov. 18 advertisement in the New York Times.

Oklahoma Baptists vow to continue ministering to illegal immigrants

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Oklahoma Baptists vow to continue ministering to illegal immigrants

By Hannah Elliott

Associated Baptist Press

MOORE, Okla. (ABP)—Messengers to the annual meeting of the Baptist General Convention of Oklahoma passed a resolution emphasizing nondiscriminating ministry to illegal immigrants and adopted a record $24.6 million budget.

“Finishing the Task” was the theme of the convention, which brought almost 900 messengers to First Baptist Church in Moore.

Lectionary helps some Baptist preachers feed their flocks a “balanced diet”

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Lectionary helps some Baptist preachers feed their flocks a 'balanced diet'

By Robert Dilday

Virginia Religious Herald

RICHMOND, Va.—It's Saturday night. Do you know where your pastor is? A pretty safe guess might be "in a study, frantically developing the next day's sermon."

But how does a preacher decide on the Scripture text? Some free-church Baptist pastors find their answer in the liturgical toolbox. They preach from the lectionary, a centuries-old cycle of Scripture readings assigned to each Sunday of the year.

Integrity demands preachers avoid pulpit plagiarism

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Integrity demands preachers avoid pulpit plagiarism

By Ken Camp

Managing Editor

If preachers pass off other people's work as their own, they automatically limit themselves to preaching about only eight commandments. "Thou shalt not steal" and "thou shalt not bear false witness" become off-limits.

But preachers can avoid plagiarism by beginning at the right place—giving time and attention to the biblical text before reading or listening to other people's sermons about the text, said Joel Gregory, professor of preaching at Baylor University's Truett Theological Seminary.

Preaching: Stand and Deliver

November 30, 2007

Posted: 11/30/07

Preaching: Stand and Deliver

By Ken Camp

Managing Editor

God chose "the foolishness of preaching" as the preferred instrument for communicating the message of salvation, the Apostle Paul wrote.

But when the time arrives to stand and deliver that message, how does a preacher measure whether it's an exercise in effectiveness or just plain foolishness?