The Preacher and the Presidents: Billy Graham in the White House

by Nancy Gibbs & Michael Duffy (Center Street)

A deadly trio of temptations—money, sex and power—have ruined the lives of many influential people, including ministers. When he still was young, evangelist Billy Graham wisely created rules that would safeguard his ministry against any appearance of sexual or financial impropriety. He pledged never to be alone with any woman other than his wife, and he instructed his evangelistic association to place him on a salary no greater than the income of an average large-church pastor.

But as Gibbs and Duffy—veteran reporters for Time magazine—note, Graham learned lessons about succumbing to the temptations of power the hard way.

For more than 50 years, Graham received unprecedented access to the White House, serving as pastor, counselor and even political adviser to presidents. Along the way, the evangelist grew in his understanding of how a close relationship with the nation's chief executive could either benefit or blemish his ministry—open doors for the spread of the gospel or tie the kingdom of God too closely to the kingdoms of this world.

The authors faithfully record innocent missteps such as when the young evangelist naively told reporters the details of a meeting with Harry Truman and then Graham and his associates, in their pistachio-green suits and white bucks, kneeled to pray on the White House lawn at the request of news photographers. Truman became incensed at what he saw as Graham's grandstanding, and he did not reconcile with him until Graham visited his home in Independence, Mo., 18 years later and apologized profusely for the blunder.

“What’s centrally important is our concern for missions and evangelism, relief and development, human rights and theological reflection.”

“Please pray for me as I continue to meet with persons such as Barack Obama, Hillary Clinton and Bill Richardson. I already have spent time with leaders such as John McCain, Mike Huckabee and Rudy Giuliani. I have spoken on the phone with persons such as Mitt Romney.”

Southern Baptist Convention president (RNS)

“The KKK is our own terrorist organization. They have murdered, lynched and terrorized thousands of people in this country, or inspired the same. It is disingenuous of us to say that someone in Saudi Arabia ought to do something about their (Muslim) hate groups and then us not do the same.”

Pastor of St. Timothy’s Episcopal Church in Athens, Ala., on his plans to organize a silent counter-protest to a rally by the Ku Klux Klan
(Huntsville Times/RNS)

I served 24 years on the Baptist General Convention of Texas Executive Board staff and five years at the Southern Baptist Convention Home Mission Board. During this time, a major shift took place in the SBC, which preceded an equally dramatic shift in the BGCT.

As a former employee of both conventions, I have been an interested observer, but not participating in the politics. From the beginning, the problems were more about conflicting personalities than fundamental issues. All my friends on both sides believe the word of God is “inerrant.” Some say it without using this word.

Book by former student-body president aims to correct record on Little Rock tell his side of the desegregation crisis at Little Rock Central High School. A lot of his classmates have been waiting, too.

“The main thing ... is that the student body of Central High in 1957-58 had a class full of extraordinary students who, both academically and athletically, would have been the envy of any high school in the country in normal times,” he said. “And, in extraordinary times, we really should look at them and be proud of their conduct, despite the fact that there might have been 50 or 60 kids in a 2,000-student body who caused problems.”

East Texas pastor to be nominated for BGCT 1st VP

By Ken Camp

Managing Editor

East Texas pastor Mike Massar—whose church launched a satellite campus and has become involved in extensive hands-on worldwide missions under his leadership—will be nominated for first vice president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas at the BGCT annual meeting in Amarillo, Oct.

29-30.

Roger Paynter, pastor of First Baptist Church in Austin, announced his intention to nominate Massar, saying First Baptist Church in Tyler has “broadened the scope of its ministry” to an “amazing” degree during his 10 years as pastor.

Rain couldn't put the brakes on church's car rally

In spite of intermittent rain throughout the day, visitors stopped at Mimosa Lane Baptist Church in Mesquite to see more than 50 cars, trucks and motorcycles on display at the church's third annual Motorama rally.

The church's Pit Stop Ministry—a volunteer program that provides basic auto maintenance and simple repairs, particularly for single mothers and needy families—sponsored the event. The church asked exhibitors to make a donation to Texas Baptist Men disaster relief as their entry fee, and the car rally raised $640 for disaster relief.

Texas Baptist Men disaster relief volunteers from Dallas Baptist Association gave away 330 hot dogs, and as visitors learned firsthand about TBM's disaster relief ministry, many searched out organizers to make a donation, George Felker of Pit Stop Ministry noted.

Presidential hopefuls look to theologian Reinhold Niebuhr

By Benedicta Cipolla

Religion & Ethics NewsWeekly

WASHINGTON (RNS)—Thirty-six years after his death, Protestant theologian Reinhold Niebuhr seems more alive than ever. Perhaps not since President Jimmy Carter acknowledged Niebuhr's influence during his 1976 campaign has his name been on the lips of so many politicians and pundits.

Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Barack Obama told New York Times columnist David Brooks that Niebuhr is “one of my favorite philosophers.”

TOGETHER: Engage all Texans with Christ's gospel

Jesus interrupted the parade and called the despised Zacchaeus out of the tree. He invited himself to go to his house. "Why would he go home with a cheating tax collector?" the crowds murmured?

Jesus gives his own answer when he explains to Zacchaeus, who clearly is touched and changed by the interest Jesus takes in him, "The Son of Man came to seek out and save the lost" (Luke 19:10).

Executive Director
BGCT Executive Board

It's time for us to interrupt our own parade and see the people in the "trees" around us, the people who do not know Jesus but need him in their lives.

The Baptist General Convention of Texas will help us do this by holding the new "Engage: Evangelizing Texas Conference" Jan. 13-15, 2008, at Lake Pointe Church in Rockwall, near Dallas. Evangelism Director Jon Randles and his staff are praying and preparing for this special gathering.

CYBER COLUMN: A sea of change

By John Duncan

I'm sitting here under the old oak tree, musing about change. To me, three things in life appear constant—death, taxes, and change. I look around Granbury and see change over the last 20 years, from Wal-Mart to Home Depot, to new schools and restaurants, to the roads once narrow now wide, to new people who bless my life.

I look at Lakeside Baptist Church and see a sea of change. The people have changed through the years, and so have I. We used to have pot-luck dinners, and now we have to have stuff catered. Change arrives in many venues, but as good Baptists, we still eat the same thing—friend chicken and biscuits, of course. Some things change, but some do not. I love change. It challenges all of us!
