Finding God's mercy through repentance

• Joel 1:15-16; 2:12-13, 18, 25-32

First Baptist Church, Duncanville

This week, we begin a new study as we turn to the minor prophets. It may be a different part of the Bible, but the message hasn't changed. Just as Peter encouraged an eternal mindset, Joel cries out for the realization that God will bring judgment on sin. We must turn to God in repentance and faith if we are going to appropriate his mercy.

Yvonne Li received an opportunity to succeed at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor nearly 40 years ago when she obtained a full scholarship. After receiving her degree in 1966, she went on to earn a master's degree in biochemistry and a doctor of medicine degree. The university's tennis courts deteriorated to the point that the school had difficulty hosting matches. Li, remembering how the university gave her an opportunity for success, was grateful for the chance to do something to show her thanks, she said.

Rescued: A Novel, by John Bevere and Mark Andrew Olsen (Bethany House)

A $12 million vessel on its way to Barbados becomes a 57,000-pound guided torpedo after its captain and sole crew member dies from cardiac arrest. A tourist submarine excursion in the path of the deadly vessel promises more than a leisurely end to a weeklong church-couples' cruise. In the aftermath of a terrible underwater accident, the adventure is just beginning.

Life and death, grace and obedience, eternity and the here-and-now all come into focus in John Bevere's novel. Rescued tells the story of a preacher, his family and his congregation as they learn God's truths can't be manipulated to make them feel better about life decisions. It is an extended parable reminding us that all are called, but few chosen. It is an eloquent plea for all Christians to return to the basics of salvation.

What are you reading that other Texas Baptists would find helpful? Send suggestions and reviews to books@baptiststandard.com.

From the first pages, it becomes obvious Bevere has written an extended sermon. Before long, though, the story takes over, and we become enmeshed in the drama unfolding before us. Though the lesson takes precedence over plot, a danger in the Christian fiction genre, it's a lesson we all need to learn.

U.S. AIR FORCE THEATER HOSPITAL, Iraq (ABP)—At the U.S. Air Force Theater Hospital in Iraq, the sounds of Army Blackhawk and Marine Sea Knight helicopters are a call to duty for Air Force Chaplain Shane Gaster.

Gaster, one of more than 90 military chaplains endorsed by the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, is stationed at the Air Force Theater Hospital—the busiest U.S. trauma center in the world. He works 12-hour shifts, six days a week, ministering to wounded men and women brought in by helicopters and humvee trucks.

As the war goes on, so does the work of military

By Marcia Nelson

Religion News Service

CHICAGO (RNS)—Once you've seen the brutal face of evil, you start looking for the tender face of God, Chaplain Robert Barry said.

Barry is an Air National Guard chaplain who spends his summers working with injured soldiers at Landstuhl military hospital in southern Germany, where American military personnel are taken after they are wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan.

HARLOTTESVILLE, Va.—Joel Jenkins, pastor of First Baptist Church of Charlottesville, Va., temporarily changed congregations last year—and the relocation was extreme. Jenkins, a longtime Army Reserve chaplain, was called to active duty in Iraq last June with barely a week's notice.

For the past 11 months, Jenkins has called a forward operating base in Baghdad's international zone home. He is assigned to the Multi-National Security Transition Command-Iraq, which employs military and civilian forces from several nations to train and equip Iraq's army, navy, air force and police force.

FRONTLINE MINISTRY: Baptist chaplain meets spiritual needs in combat

By Barbara Bedrick

BGCT Communications

The closer people get to a foxhole, the more spiritual they generally become, a frontline military chaplain observed.

Tough circumstances—and the accompanying escalated interest in spiritual matters—provide countless opportunities for military chaplains like U.S. Navy Capt. Bill Perdue of the 1st Marine Division, who recently returned from a one-year tour of duty in Baghdad and Fallujah as a multi-national Marine Expeditionary Force chaplain.

"On three occasions, rocket and mortar fire landed within 50 yards of our chapel and killed a civilian contractor 30 feet away," Perdue recalled.
