NBC puts seasoning back in Veggies

WASHINGTON (RNS)—Fans of Bob the Tomato and Larry the Cucumber may notice a welcome change in the VeggieTales episodes aired on NBC's Saturday morning cartoon lineup—less editing of religious content than originally feared.

"The last batch of episodes are airing with very little editing," VeggieTales creator Phil Vischer said. "Not none whatsoever, but very nearly none whatsoever. Much less than earlier episodes."

The Jews' return from Babylonian captivity seemed like a second exodus, sovereignly patterned in some ways after Israel's first redemption from Egyptian bondage. The book of Ezra begins with the decree of Cyrus for the Jews to return to Jerusalem (circa 538 B.C.), and chronicles the reestablishment of Judah's national calendar of feasts and sacrifices, including the rebuilding of the second temple (begun in 536 B.C. and completed in 516 B.C.).

CYBER COLUMN: At home again

By Berry Simpson

I just finished reading The Year of Magical Thinking by Joan Didion, a powerful book that will haunt me (in a good way) for a long time. In fact, the reason it sat on my too-be-read shelf for over a year was because I'd heard enough about it to know it would have a big impact on me and I didn't want to read it until I was ready. But my friend Carol kept asking if I'd read it yet and I couldn't keep telling her I was waiting to start.

Berry D. Simpson

I can't write about most of what Didion said because I haven't experienced the losses she had—the loss of her spouse and the loss of control to help her family—and I just don't feel qualified. I don't think I'm grown up enough to write about all of that. But I can write about this—something she said about being at home. She wrote: "In California, we heated our houses by building fires. We built fires even on summer evenings, because the fog came in. Fires said we were home, we had drawn the circle, we were safe through the night. I lit the candles."
