Effectiveness often necessitates change

- Isaiah 40:1-43:28

By James Adair

Baptist University of the Americas, San Antonio

A major shift in perspective from the earlier chapters of Isaiah occurs in chapter 40. Whereas chapters 1-39 are set in the days of Isaiah in Jerusalem, in the eighth century B.C., chapters 40-66 are set in the Babylonian exile and its aftermath, starting in the sixth century B.C., and many of the prophecies appear to have been delivered in Babylon.

Praying when you don't know what to pray

By Jeanie Miley

Coming in from the ICU, I was exhausted and anxious. I'd gotten the call to meet my husband again at the Emergency Room, and one more time, I'd been scared out of my wits.

Once things were stabilized, I headed home, praying specifically that the doctors would do something. Mostly, my prayer was "Help! Help us, please!"

Senators say 'breakthrough'

on immigration plan near

By John Hall

Texas Baptist Communications

WASHINGTON—The U.S. Senate April 6 voted down a plan for immigration reform 60-39, but soon after announced a “huge breakthrough” in gaining bipartisan support for a reform plan that would enable undocumented immigrants eventually to become citizens.

Laying on hands

Scripture places much more importance upon “laying on hands” than those esteemed men who were cited in “Laying on hands” (March 20). Hebrews 6:1-2 lists laying on hands as a foundational doctrine, giving it weight equal to repentance from dead works, faith toward God, baptisms, resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment.

"For faith to be authentic, it must be freely embraced. ... In a post-9/11 world where individuals die for their faith while others kill in the name of their religion, America's founding principle of religious liberty takes on even greater prominence."

Robert A. Seiple

U.S. ambassador-at-large for international religious freedom (RNS)

"Immigrants have values that can convert America and return America to the values of thrift and hard work."

Manuel A. Vasquez

University of Florida religion professor (RNS)

"My sense is that we will see the development of human/animal hybrids, mammals that have more and more bits of human in them. You can see a progression developing here that you might not be able to stop."

Nigel Cameron

Professor of bioethics at the Illinois Institute of Technology (RNS)

"It's arrogant to say that either religion or science can answer all our questions. I don't see the need either to banish one or the other or to artificially unite them."

Susan Fisher Miller

Editor and English professor in Atlanta, commenting on the "debate" between religion and evolution (New York Times)

How could Charles Spurgeon reject the practice “as a form of ritualism that could easily lapse into popery”? He did not refuse to preach the doctrines of grace, although many perverted the teachings to become libertines.

CYBER COLUMN: Sand on the seashore

By John Duncan

I'm sitting here under the old oak tree, pondering the tides of life. The ocean tides ebb and flow amid picturesque sunsets, where the orange sun reflects on blue waters while the ocean tides ripple to the shore. Life has its ebb and flow and sunsets and ripple effects, too.

During spring break, I took a trip to Mexico. I walked on the sandy beach with the sand sandwiched between my toes. Can I, as a preacher of good news, ever walk on the sandy shores of a beach without thinking of God's word to Abraham that he will bless his chosen people as the sands of the sea? (Genesis 22:17) I take that to mean that God's one big blessing will come in small doses like tiny grains of sand squishing together on ocean shores to make a beach where seashells turn up and crabs burrow and seaweed washes up and where sunbathers lay out under the scorching heat and little girls and boys with plastic shovels build sand castles.
