Texas Tidbits

American Family Association honors Sloan. The American Family Association presented its highest award to Baylor University President Robert Sloan for "exceptional and devoted leadership to God and country." Tim Wildmon, president of the association, made the presentation, which was carried live on more than 200 American Family Radio affiliates nationwide. Wildmon was at Baylor for a news conference with Christian singer/songwriter Steven Curtis Chapman, who will perform a free concert in Waco Sept. 18 at Floyd Casey Stadium. Founded in 1977 by Don Wildmon, the American Family Association is a national Christian organization that focuses primarily on the influence of television and other media on society.

Baylor, Hardin-Simmons picked 'best in west.' Baylor University in Waco and Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene have been selected by The Princeton Review in the 2005 edition as among the "Best in the West" colleges and universities. They are among 23 Texas schools featured, including 13 private or church-related schools and 10 state schools.

Endowed scholarship named at UMHB. An endowed presidential scholarship at the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor has been named in memory of Delores Hinton of Temple. She was one of seven people killed in a bus accident on Feb. 14, 2003, including five members of Memorial Baptist Church in Temple. Hinton—who devoted 20 years to public education as a teacher, counselor and administrator—retired from UMHB in 1991 after 10 years as a professor of education and director of the mid-management graduate program. The scholarship will benefit students preparing for a teaching career.

TOGETHER: Mission statement focuses on 'doing'

What shall we give ourselves to do the next few years in the Baptist General Convention of Texas? For the past five years, we have assisted churches and related ministries to be the presence of Christ in the world. Churches across Texas have asked themselves, “If Jesus came to our town, where would he go, who would he talk to, what questions would he ask, who would he comfort and who would he confront, what would make him cry, what would cause him to laugh?”

When you know the answer to those questions, you have a pretty good idea what the agenda for your church and your life needs to be. Churches begin to change when they realize they are the continuing presence of Christ in the world. If the church is, as Paul describes it, the body of Christ, then the church is the continuation of the incarnation of God in the world. The church is making visible and tangible the reality of Christ Jesus so people can get close, can experience the warmth, can know God. The effectiveness of a church in conveying that truth is dependent on two things—their obedience to God's call and commands as made known in Scripture and their sensitivity and openness to the Holy Spirit.

So, why am I suggesting we craft a new mission statement for the BGCT? Because the current one is more about “who” we are than “what” we are called to do. We need a better description of what we are to do to help churches achieve their goals.

By Berry D. Simpson

When Cyndi and I learned our weekend assignment for Rock the Desert (a Christian concert weekend) was to drive a 16-passenger van carrying Kutless, a Christian rock band from Portland, I looked them up on the Internet and realized, "We don't have enough tattoos to hang out with these guys."

Well, as it turned out, we didn't need tattoos. No matter how much tattooing or piercing or spiky hair or black clothes we might have added, we still would've looked like their parents. And worse, parents trying to look cool.

CYBERCOLUMN: TV 'church' & real church

By Jeanie Miley

I'm not much for flipping through channels, but the other night, on my way to my favorite program, I braked to see a current "star" of televangelism.

The program couldn't have been better choreographed. The sets were striking. The music was upbeat and lively, and the crowd was well-behaved. The preacher was perfectly prepared, and he delivered his message with just the right amount of everything.

TOGETHER: Yearn for the sea, vault for the gold

Paul Hamm pressed on, refusing to let an embarrassing fall mark the way he would remember the 2004 Olympics.

In the fourth of six events which make up the men's all-around gymnastics championship, Hamm vaulted. When he landed on his seat rather than his feet, the air seemed to go out of the hopes the Americans had for their first gold medal in that event. All his hard work and dreams suddenly evaporated. The announcer warned no one could get an Olympic gold after such a glaring fault.

The Apostle Paul wrote to the church in the Greek town of Philippi: “I press on to take hold of that for which Christ Jesus took hold of me. Brothers, ... one thing I do: Forgetting what is behind and straining toward what is ahead, I press on toward the goal to win the prize for which God has called me heavenward in Christ Jesus” (Philippians 3:12-14).
