

Youth suicide prevention during the COVID-19 pandemic

February 3, 2021

Michael Chancellor, a licensed professional counselor in Round Rock, shares ways to reduce youth stress and suicide during the pandemic.

Psalms are ancient resource for a novel time: Part 2

February 3, 2021

Rebecca Poe Hays, assistant professor of Christian Scriptures at Truett Theological Seminary, points to five ways the Psalms help during a pandemic.

Psalms are ancient resource for a novel time: Part 1

February 3, 2021

Rebecca Poe Hays, assistant professor of Christian Scriptures at Truett Theological Seminary, points to five ways the Psalms help during a pandemic.

Hymnals' value for your worship planning

February 3, 2021

Scott Aniol, associate professor of church music and worship at Southwestern Seminary, suggests five reasons for using a hymnal in worship planning.

Pastoring during political turbulence

February 3, 2021

Scotty Swingler describes the similarity of political turmoil in Jesus' day and in our own, calling pastors to eschew partisanship.

Shepherding Christians who want to pursue racial justice

February 3, 2021

Adam Jones offers perspective on how ministers can lead their congregations and ministries in pursuing racial justice.

Want to grow your church? Watch out for these pitfalls, Part 2

February 3, 2021

Ryan Vanderland outlines pitfalls of church growth attempts to address stagnation and decline. This is Part 2 of two parts.

Want to grow your church? Watch out for these pitfalls,

Part 1

February 3, 2021

Ryan Vanderland outlines pitfalls of church growth attempts to address stagnation and decline. This is Part 1 of two parts.

Caring for others through trauma-sensitive language

February 3, 2021

Spiritual leaders need to care about communicating in ways that don't trigger trauma in people already traumatized.

The pandemic calls for innovative responses

February 3, 2021

What does your church have that God can use to meet needs in your community during the coronavirus pandemic? You may have more than you think.

Practical ways churches can care for orphans and foster kids

February 3, 2021

Cody McCommas, executive pastor of Christ Community Church of Denton, shares practical ways churches can care for children needing families.

How to walk alongside people recovering from addiction

February 3, 2021

Lacey Fitch-Ondracek shares her story of recovery and how churches and others can walk alongside people through the process of recovery.