

Season of sadness

October 10, 2009

This is a deeply sad time for Texas Baptists, and particularly for First Baptist Church in Corsicana, whose pastor, David Edwards, died Oct. 9.

Fourth quarter

October 10, 2009

When asked how Texas Baptists' Texas Hope 2010 ministry/evangelism endeavor is going, Executive Director Randel Everett pulled out a spot-on metaphor.

God bless mentors

October 10, 2009

Thank God for mentors—those human angels who come alongside young people and offer the blessed benefits of their gifts, experience, wisdom and maturity.

Lying for Jesus?

October 10, 2009

Should missionaries lie to foreign governments and deceive people in order to advance the gospel?

Longing for Sabbath

October 10, 2009

I've always found "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy" to be the toughest of the Ten Commandments. And yet, just maybe, it promises the most.

The Holy what?

October 10, 2009

Do Baptists REALLY believe in the Holy Spirit? And is that failure to believe the reason we're so powerless?

Faith & volunteerism

October 10, 2009

What's the best source for volunteers in America? Go ahead, make a guess.

Undoing the holy

October 10, 2009

The relatively new practice of de-baptizing seems like a goofy trend. But it points to some serious issues.

Think for yourself

October 10, 2009

So, why doesn't the Baptist Standard tell you the "correct" position on every article we publish? We respect you too much for that.

Fear, prayer & faith

October 10, 2009

I don't know how prayer works. But I know I can't quit praying.

Baptist reunification?

October 10, 2009

"Will the Baptist conventions come back together?" my father-in-law asked over Sunday lunch.

Church/state neighbors

October 10, 2009

Robert Frost's 1914 poem "Mending Wall" repeats a line of wisdom passed down from generation to generation: "Good fences make good neighbors." And that's good advice for both church and state.
