

Free to leave?

February 9, 2011

A friend sent me a note on Facebook: "Is 'not being fed' ever a reason to leave a church? If so, in what instance? And if the answer is 'no,' is there ever a good reason to leave a church, aside from relocating?"

Principle or pragmatism?

February 9, 2011

The United States' relationship with Egypt—and the outcome of revolution—places American pragmatism over against principle.

God loves football?

February 9, 2011

God possesses an ironic sense of humor. Just ask Jerry Jones, who might think you're asking him if he possesses an ironic sense of humor.

Oh, boy!

February 9, 2011

Praise God, from whom all blessings flow. And especially for Ezra Bruce Kahler, our first grandchild.

Still a dream

February 9, 2011

Martin Luther King's dream for America was magnificent. We've made progress, but we're not there yet.

Civility strikeout

February 9, 2011

In a sad but unsurprising development, the Civility Project died for lack of interest.

Gravitational pull

February 9, 2011

Pollster George Barna has identified six "megathemes" of the U.S. Christian church. Five of them point to trouble.

It's not over

February 9, 2011

Once upon a time, I wrote, "Nothing's ever over quite like Christmas." I was right, but not exactly how I meant it.

Spectacular 'decorations'

February 9, 2011

Our neighborhood is all decked out for Christmas. But what I've seen in the sky tops everything.

Merry Christmas. Really.

February 9, 2011

'Tis the season, and the Christmas/Holidays warriors are at it again. They just love to spread Christmas jeer.

Season of love

February 9, 2011

This is the hardest week of Advent. We focus on love.

Season of hope

February 9, 2011

The first week of Advent focuses on hope. Boy, do we ever need it.
