March 16, 2022

Seven student winners of Baylor University's fifth biennial Semper Pro Musica Solo and Chamber Competition will perform at New York City's prestigious Carnegie Hall. Begun in 2016 and currently held every two years, the Semper Pro Musica Solo and Chamber Competition in the Baylor School of Music identifies the school's top talent. After two rounds of rigorous competition, the winners have the opportunity to present a recital at a significant external performance venue. Winners of the solo competition are Sylvia Jones, a soprano vocalist from Auburn, Wash.; Cezary Karwowski, a pianist from Bialystok, Poland; and Max Winningham, a double bassist from Houston. The winner of the chamber competition is Baylor's Fest Quartet, composed of violinist Freya Downey from Norman, Okla.; violinist Darren Carter from Dallas; violinist Elise Maas from San Antonio; and cellist Samuel Day from Benton, Wisc. The students will perform in Carnegie Hall's Weill Recital Hall at 8 p.m. on May 26. "Weill Recital Hall is where about 98 percent of Carnegie Hall debuts take place, and it is arguably the most important recital space in the world over the last century," said Gary Mortenson, dean of the Baylor School of Music. "The experience of performing there is truly an experience like no other in the world of music today, and our talented student winners will remember their performances at Carnegie Hall for the rest of their lives."

Five universities affiliated with the Baptist General Convention of Texas were named Military Friendly Schools for the 2022-23 academic year. Dallas Baptist University, Houston Baptist University and the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor received the gold designation in the category of private schools offering doctorates. Wayland Baptist University received the silver designation in the same category. Howard Payne University received bronze recognition in the category of private schools not offering doctorates. The annual Military Friendly Schools survey is offered to more than 8,800 institutions nationwide. Schools are graded on their ability to meet minimum thresholds for student retention, graduation rate, job placement, loan repayment and loan default rates for all students and—specifically—for veterans. Measurement categories include academic policies and compliance, military student support and retention, graduation and career outcomes, admission and orientation, culture and commitment, and financial aid and loan repayment.
