

Baptist Standard receives awards for website design

April 27, 2023

The Baptist Standard won five awards in national competitions, including recognition by both Associated Church Press and the Evangelical Press Association for its website.

The Standard received an Award of Merit from Associated Church Press for website redesign and a second place Higher Goals award for website design from the Evangelical Press Association.

Judges in the Evangelical Press Association competition commented on the website's "clean, simple, uncluttered" appearance, noting it "gives an impressive mix of content room to breathe" and offers readers the opportunity to engage.

The Standard earned an Award of Merit for overall excellence in the "denominational digital" category from the Evangelical Press Association.

Editor Eric Black received fourth place Higher Goals recognition in the Evangelical Press Association editorial category for "Accountability requires more than four pastors," which examined the "restoration" of pastors accused of sexual abuse.

Judges praised the "morally clear voice" and the "clear, powerful writing—made more effective by the combination of concise reportage and sharp editorial comment." The subject matter "couldn't be more timely," the judges noted.

Managing Editor Ken Camp received fourth place Higher Goals recognition in the Evangelical Press Association reporting category for "Kachin Baptist

leader detained in Myanmar.”

“The level of insight is excellent,” judges stated. They considered the article “clearly written” and said it included “a great collection of sources.”