

Out of the flood

July 16, 2018

Three teens survived a rising river at a Bible camp in the Texas Hill Country. Would their faith?

In the pre-dawn light of July 17, 1987, nearly 40 kids struggled in the Guadalupe River as it overflowed its banks in Comfort, 50 miles northwest of San Antonio. They had woken early on their last day of Bible camp and skipped breakfast to get ahead of the looming flood, but they were too late.

Continue reading this article in Christianity Today.