

Commentary: Christianity isn't a sales pitch

March 25, 2026

Taylor Standridge examines the problems with approaching evangelism as a sales pitch and calls for a more gospel-like approach.

Voices: Do infants go to heaven? A chaplain's perspective

March 25, 2026

Parents who lose small children often want to know if their child will go to heaven. A Texas Baptist-endorsed chaplain shares a response.

Commentary: Ascent's take on doctrine, mission conversation

March 25, 2026

Chris Backert, senior director of the Ascent Movement, responds to a set of articles on doctrine and mission spurred by the Ascent Summit.

Voices: Words of grace in times of rage, Part 2

March 25, 2026

Joshua Sharp describes what is expected of Christians when addressing societal problems and suggests three ways to take local action.

Editorial: Our doctrine and mission matter in these days

March 25, 2026

Editor Eric Black engages with responses—some on Facebook, some published here—to his previous editorial on doctrine and mission.

Voices: Doctrine and mission need each other

March 25, 2026

Kimlyn Bender responds to Editor Eric Black's editorial on doctrine and mission, contending they are integral to each other.

Voices: Who will we work with to accomplish our mission?

March 25, 2026

Scott Jones responds to Editor Eric Black's editorial on doctrine and mission, asking if those differing on doctrine can work together.

Voices: The relationship between doctrine and mission

March 25, 2026

Jordan Villanueva responds to Editor Eric Black's editorial on mission and doctrine with an explanation of doctrinally informed mission.

Commentary: Is war ever justified?

March 25, 2026

Jim Lemons describes the six principles of just war theory and evaluates the current U.S.-Israeli war with Iran in light of those principles.

Editorial: Mission, not doctrine, should drive the train

March 25, 2026

Mission and doctrine each have their place, and they need to be kept in their right place to move the train down the track in joy.

Voices: Words of grace in times of rage, Part 1

March 25, 2026

When his church members became upset over his social media posts, Joshua Sharp realized he needed to change. He tells us how he's doing that.

Voices: Truth and love: Thinking carefully about Sharia and civil law

March 25, 2026

Calling for dignity and truth, retired pastor and missionary David McConkey points to key differences between Sharia and American law.