

Editorial: We don't understand Easter like we should

April 13, 2022

To celebrate Easter fully, we must take full account of what came first, coming to grips with how it should have gone before we can celebrate how it went.

Editorial: God's call does not excuse assault

April 13, 2022

Using God's name too often lulls people of faith into overlooking subtle forms of abuse, opening the door to more blatantly egregious wrongs.

Editorial: What will you leave when you're gone?

April 13, 2022

Don and Nancy Boyd showed that to leave lasting good, we should be faithful to God, love much and invest in people generously.

Editorial: Does our moral compass still recognize evil?

April 13, 2022

We ought to be horrified at what war will lead us to do, even the best of us. Before war, there is evil, of which war is merely a symptom.

Editorial: Keep the whole world and Christ in view

April 13, 2022

“The war in Ukraine deserves our attention. So does ongoing unrest in at least 23 other places around the world,” Editor Eric Black contends.

Editorial: A religious press if

Putin were in charge

April 13, 2022

Russia's attempted control of the narrative about its invasion of Ukraine illustrates what Christians lose without a free religious press.

Editorial: You can't fix the world, but you can love

April 13, 2022

"There are no right words right now. The time for right words has passed. Now is the time for right action."

Editorial: Redressing sexual abuse must be thorough

April 13, 2022

Recent statements during the SBC Executive Committee meeting point to the extent of work needed to rectify sexual abuse.

Editorial: What do we need to see in Ukraine?

April 13, 2022

Ukraine is not just a “bargaining chip” for global superpowers, but is a place where God is at work among millions of people.

Editorial: Wisdom needed more than book challenges

April 13, 2022

Pulling books from school library shelves is no substitute for teaching what students need much more: wisdom.

Guest Editorial: Black

history—my American history

April 13, 2022

Pastor John Ogletree, longtime Baptist leader in Texas, shares his experience of America and spurs Christians to face the truth of their shared history.

Editorial: Are we ready for a tighter near term?

April 13, 2022

“We are human, but we mustn’t face the challenges before us on human terms. Following Christ means we face them on God’s terms.”