

Editorial: Mask or no mask: Are we (still) on the same team?

March 3, 2021

Editor Eric Black responds to Gov. Greg Abbott's Mar. 2 announcement about masks by encouraging Christians to focus on their common ground.

Editorial: Winter storm damage may reveal a deeper problem

March 3, 2021

Trying to figure out who's responsible for recent winter storm damages can be an exercise in seeing a deeper and more pervasive problem.

Editorial: Trusting God while living in a world beyond our control

March 3, 2021

How Christians are to live in the world seems counterintuitive and ineffective but rests on the witness of Scripture and Christian history.

Editorial: Win-win solutions or win-lose outcomes

March 3, 2021

A lesson taken from the impeachment trial: Winner-take-all approaches may overshadow the best solutions for all involved during conflict.

Editorial: Racism is a destructive fire. Put it out.

March 3, 2021

Editor Eric Black denounces racism and the vile letters received by two Texas Baptist pastors. Racism in all its forms must be opposed.

Editorial: A question to focus us on what matters most: “So, what?”

March 3, 2021

Editor Eric Black contends we need to test our thoughts and actions in light of what matters most to followers of Jesus.

Editorial: Biden’s pastoral presidency and the ‘power of our example’

March 3, 2021

Biden’s efforts at unity and his attention to those who suffer are a pastoral model and powerful example Christians can appreciate.

Editorial: Christians need to be ‘little Christs’ again

March 3, 2021

Editor Eric Black calls Christians to return to what being a Christian meant before Constantine conflated Christianity with earthly power.

Editorial: The disgust of the storming of the U.S. Capitol

March 3, 2021

Editor Eric Black responds to the appalling assault on the U.S. Capitol and what it shows about Americans and Christians in America.

Editorial: Three qualities for fighting pandemic fatigue

March 3, 2021

Since the pandemic isn't over, Christians need to engage courage, creativity and compassion found in Jesus.

Editorial: How challenging 2021 will be is up to us

March 3, 2021

The challenges of 2020 will continue into 2021, and how challenging they will be is up to us. Will we work together or work against each other?

Editorial: I was going to write on joy, and then ...

March 3, 2021

Editor Eric Black opens a window into what some religious leaders are experiencing during a so-called season of joy.