

Editorial: Breadcrumbs in the bellybutton and other stunts

June 20, 2013

If Ezra could articulate his thoughts, we could understand why he decided to start sticking breadcrumbs in his belly button and then eating them.

Editorial: The possibility of being wrong

June 20, 2013

Humility is not earned. It's bequeathed through mistakes, errors, blunders, gaffes and miscalculations.

Editorial: Baptists won't remarry, but maybe we can do one thing

June 20, 2013

"Do you think Baptists ever will get back together again?" a young friend asked over lunch the other day.

Editorial: Boy Scouts, cultural hegemony & transforming love

June 20, 2013

If Christians lose a “culture war,” they can still demonstrate the transforming love of Jesus.

Editorial: ‘If We Knew Then,’ random elements and faith

June 20, 2013

Every so often, I play the “If We Knew Then ...” Game.

Editorial: Abercrombie, Fitch and who we welcome

June 20, 2013

Are you cool enough for Abercrombie & Fitch? Chances are, the answer is “No.”

Editorial: Cheerleaders win, but what about the cause of Christ?

June 20, 2013

Kountze’s Scripture-quoting cheerleaders won the latest round in their battle to paint Bible verses on run-through signs at football games.

Editorial: Love can overcome fear of ‘the world’

June 20, 2013

If we love God’s creation—even the people who challenge and contradict and hate us—we can be instruments that drive out fear.

Editorial: Despite calamity and chaos, God will deliver good

June 20, 2013

The Boston Marathon bombing, the West fertilizer-plant explosion and the Washington ricin letters riveted our attention on death and destruction. Preachers rightfully turned to Psalm 46.

Editorial: The Counter-counter Reformation & an outward-focused church

June 20, 2013

Pope Francis keeps making 2013 an ever-more-significant date in church history.

Editorial: Love your neighbor; donate your organs

June 20, 2013

April is Organ Donation Month. Would you join me by registering to donate your organs? It's one of the best things either of us can do.

Editorial: Ants, Texas Baptists, Mother's Day & world hunger

June 20, 2013

Individually, ants aren't so smart. But collectively, they possess enormous intelligence. Could Texas Baptists learn from our insect friends?