

Cultural perceptions and misconceptions

October 30, 2009

I had an interesting lunch conversation with my coworkers here in Kenya—one that prompted me to think about how our assumptions are often misconceptions.

Quotes in the News

October 30, 2009

“If you saw a woman struck by a car, would you call an ambulance right away? Or would you first ask for her papers to make sure she was not an illegal immigrant?”-E.J. Dionne

Recognizing the hope of glory

October 30, 2009

The past few weeks serving in Northern Africa, I have begun to realize—yet again—how great a hope to which I have been called.

Sharing life together in Kenya

October 30, 2009

Recently, I was asked to share something meaningful that I've experienced since I've been in Kenya. Immediately, thousands of thoughts invade my brain, recalling the past three and half months in detail.

EDITORIAL: What's next for Baptists Committed?

October 30, 2009

Texas Baptists Committed's board of directors must decide what to do with the organization, the most potent political force among Texas Baptists for the past quarter-century. The answer will have profound consequences for the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

DOWN HOME: Sage advice from a pigskin prophet

October 30, 2009

I've seen the spirit of individualism infect our churches and our convention. People talk more about "I" than "we." Preachers focus on "you" instead of "us."

RIGHT or WRONG? Extravagant weddings

October 30, 2009

Each wedding at our church seems more ostentatious than the last. Brides' and grooms' families spend an extraordinary amount of money. How can these displays be reined in and more attention focused on two lives coming together?

Quotes in the News

October 30, 2009

"If you have been gay your whole life and feel that that's the way God made you, God bless you. But I would still say that that doesn't mean you should act on that."-Timothy Dolan
