

Voices: It takes a community to serve a community

October 6, 2025

Stacy Conner points to the shared ministry of funerals as an example of how the body of Christ puts the gospel into action.

Editorial: There's only one litmus test for a Christian

October 6, 2025

Remembering Jesus is Lord and we are to obey him will guide our way through these divided, conflicted, testing times.

Voices: Jesus died for those we call our enemies

October 6, 2025

Myles Werntz urges Baptists to rethink war, peace, and what it means to follow Christ in a violent world.

Voices: Going the distance in the pastoral life

October 6, 2025

Ron Cook, veteran pastor and professor of pastoral ministry, shares what brought him to ministry and held him fast for the long haul.

Letter: Only two-thirds of U.S. Christians believe all have sinned

October 6, 2025

A Baptist Standard reader responds to a report on Barna survey results showing only 66 percent of Christians believe all people have sinned.

Editorial: It's safe to say ... or is it?

October 6, 2025

I expect the world to be an unsafe place right now. I don't expect the church to be. But we are. We can change that.

Commentary: Applauding forgiveness like Erika Kirk's

October 6, 2025

Ginger McPherson shares how she looks to many women as models of both public and private forgiveness.

Letter: A call to heed Paul's instruction on vengeance

October 6, 2025

A Baptist Standard reader urges President Donald Trump and his supporters to read Paul's instruction on vengeance.

Voices: My journey with Wesleyan Christians

October 6, 2025

Dean Todd Still, Truett Theological Seminary, reflects on what he is learning to appreciate about Wesleyanism, while committedly Baptist.

Editorial: How I am processing recent violence

October 6, 2025

I'm going to talk about traumatizing things, and I'm going to challenge Christians to focus on who Jesus commands us to be. Our present moment demands it.

Commentary: Without Johnson

Amendment, churches can be corrupted

October 6, 2025

A look at the implications of changes to the Johnson Amendment and how they could affect the role of faith-based and nonprofit organizations in politics.

Voices: The Holy Spirit and the means of grace

October 6, 2025

J. Matthew Barnes reflects on Wesleyan tradition and the Spirit-filled vision of transformation through the means of grace.