

East Asia: Sharing the gospel, encouraging believers

January 7, 2020

A Go Now Mission team served in East Asia over Christmas break, working in a city where more than 1 million college students live and study. So, their task was to meet college students, help lead English classes and attend Christmas parties, looking for opportunities to share the gospel.

One of the team members shared a conversation she had with a new friend:

(Courtesy of Go Now Missions)

“It was lunch time when we shared the gospel with two students. One of them turned to me and asked if I believe all this. I said yes! The student asked, ‘How can I believe this if my environment never taught me about it, not even my family?’ I explained to the student that there was a time in my life when someone spoke to me about the gospel, just like we did to them. But I was never taught about it at home, so I had to choose. I explained many more things and answered more questions. At the end the student really amazed said, ‘After you explain this to me, I think I can believe more about God.’”

Another student on the team told about an opportunity they had to study the Bible with a believer and some of her friends. “We sat in a circle and sang worship songs. After that, we talked about what the songs meant and why we sang them. We read Scripture and talked about who God is. The students were engaged and asked questions, and we were able to share our testimonies with them. Both the students agreed to continue meeting with our friends to read the Bible together.”

Pray for these new friends as they continue studying Scripture. Pray for the other many college students in this city who do not know God personally, that those who are believers would be bold in sharing the gospel with those who have never heard. And pray for the Go Now students, that as they return to their own campus for the spring semester they would continue to share the gospel with students who have not heard.

Compiled by Erica Harnisch with Texas Baptists' Collegiate Ministries, from reports submitted by students who served with Go Now Missions.