

Fort Worth: Going 'all-in' for missions

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: The University of Texas at Austin Baptist Student Ministry spent three cold days in Fort Worth on an "All-In" mission trip. From a crowded refugee apartment church, to playing with kids, to teaching youth line dancing, we definitely had to be "all-in."

East Asia: Dangerous truth

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: "Seeking truth is dangerous." My friend is right. Truth is dangerous. Yet it is truth alone that frees us.

East Asia: Change in direction

February 2, 2017

Student Missions blog: I had no idea my whole life was going to change over Christmas break. I fell in love with the gospel all over again. I fell in love with showing the love of Jesus to the least of these.

Baton Rouge: Heartbreaking stories and new beginnings

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: We saw home after home with “for sale” signs in front. FEMA trailers were here and there to provide a home for those lucky enough to receive one. It was sad to see debris still everywhere and for some houses to be in the condition there were in.

East Asia: Answered prayers all along the way

February 2, 2017

In the month leading up to my departure for two weeks in East Asia with Go Now Missions, I prayed most urgently for patience. Christ began answering my prayers, starting at the airport.

South Asia: Where God changed

my heart

February 2, 2017

God sent me to South Asia for a reason—so I could share the hope of Jesus Christ with others. Who would have thought a shy college student would be going around looking for people of peace who could open doors for ministry?

UTD: Reading the Bible through fresh eyes

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: My friend Shea and I have the blessing of studying the Gospel of John this semester with our international student friend who is not yet a follower of Christ. It's beautiful to hear our friend read a passage of Scripture in her native language for the first time.

Rice University: Importance of intentionality

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: We sometimes overlook the importance of intentionality. We are sure to turn it on when it's convenient, and at other inconvenient and uncomfortable moments, we turn it off.

Tarleton State University: Partnership means giving and receiving

February 2, 2017

A trip to the Pacific Northwest last year sparked an ongoing partnership between the Baptist Student Ministry at Tarleton State University and Northwest Collegiate Ministries.

Houston: Learning to love

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: While working alongside 10 other missionaries in the food pantry, during senior adult ministry, at the nursery, and every afternoon at Kids' Club and Youth Club, I have been learning some tough lessons.

New York: Learning from a third-grader

February 2, 2017

Students Missions Blog: Kids are so funny and capable of making you think about really profound stuff.

Peru: From culture shock to continuing mission

February 2, 2017

Student Missions Blog: During the two months I served as a summer mission in Peru, there were times when I was hungry, times when I was cold and times when I missed my family. I was ready to step off that plane onto American soil—or so I thought.
