

Voices: Justice looks like stepping in and seeking solutions for others

June 7, 2021

Dr. Gus Reyes describes justice through the lens of childhood experiences with his parents, siblings, pastor and church.

Voices: What justice looks like depends on where you're standing

June 7, 2021

Scott Collins, vice president of communication for Buckner International, encourages us to look at justice from the other person's perspective.

Voices: Justice is something we learn and practice

June 7, 2021

Wes Keyes, executive director of Brother Bill's Helping Hand, emphasizes that justice is something we learn and practice.

Voces: La Justicia se Ve como una Invitación Divina

June 7, 2021

Hay muchas áreas donde se necesita justicia. Escuchemos la invitación de Dios. Encontremos nuestro lugar al servicio del reino de Dios. Démosle el honor y la gloria a Dios mediante acciones justas y rectas.

Voices: Justice looks like a Toni Morrison plot

June 7, 2021

Dr. Michelle Henry, a professor of English, discusses what justice looks like through the lens of Toni Morrison's novels.

Voices: I never knew I was Black

June 7, 2021

Levi Bedilu describes what he discovered coming to America and calls the church to overcome the division he found even in it.

Voices: Justice looks like my bookshelves

June 7, 2021

Jean Humphreys, reflecting on what women in her family taught her about justice, shares how the pandemic also has taught her about justice.

Voices: Justice looks like putting out the fire

June 7, 2021

Dr. Roy Cotton calls attention to the urgency for justice and the disparity in its distribution between differing communities.

Voices: Justice looks like a widow not giving up

June 7, 2021

Myles Werntz describes justice through Jesus' parable (Luke 18:1-8) about prayer depicting a widow persistently confronting a judge.

Voices: For many, justice looks far away

June 7, 2021

Judge Os Chrisman comments on his role in seeking justice and his faith practice toward that end.

Voices: Justice looks and sounds like ‘just us’

June 7, 2021

Latisha Waters Hearne, a doctoral candidate at Dallas Baptist University, suggests a basic definition of justice and personal application.

Voices: Justice looks like shalom for my neighbor

June 7, 2021

Anyra Cano describes justice as God’s shalom, wholeness, demonstrated by Jesus throughout his earthly life and ministry.