

Voices: Justice looks like a church playground where all can play

March 22, 2021

Dr. Joe Rangel contends justice is sometimes corrective action, a view shaped by a painful childhood memory at church and Micah 6:8.

Voices: Justice looks like God's law

March 22, 2021

Randy Dale discusses justice from his viewpoint as an assistant district attorney and professor of criminal law.

Voices: Justice looks like 'fighting for the good of everyone'

March 22, 2021

Cynthia Aulds, director of the Coalition to Combat Human Trafficking in Texas, explains the role of justice in addressing human trafficking.

Voices: Justice looks like jumping in the water

March 22, 2021

Michael Mills, pastor of Agape Baptist Church in Fort Worth, shares how he is learning to engage in the work of justice.

Voices: Justice must precede peace, calm and healing

March 22, 2021

Jeremy Everett reminds churches they have a role in justice, from the abstract of faith formation to the concrete of feeding the hungry.

Voices: Justice is the right key to the right door

March 22, 2021

Rev. Cokiesha Bailey-Robinson contends, “Justice ... includes all people at the table with equal and distributed power.”

Voices: Learning justice demands all of me

March 22, 2021

Gaynor Yancey, professor of social work at Baylor University and Truett Seminary, shares her lifelong process of learning about justice.

Voices: Justice needs you. I need you.

March 22, 2021

Pastor Kan'Dace Brock lists many, but not all, reasons she and other Black men and women are tired and what is needed to address racial justice.

Voices: Justice looks like a healthy relationship

March 22, 2021

Kirk Stowers, a law enforcement officer since 2002, describes how justice can look like a healthy relationship if people will extend grace.

Voices: Justice looks like antiracism

March 22, 2021

Jon Singletary, dean of Baylor University's Garland School of Social Work, contends justice requires actively working against racism everywhere.

Voices: Justice requires a biblical, stable foundation

March 22, 2021

Ricardo Brambila explains how the justice he sought as a child in Mexico is found in “the moral standard of the word of God.”

Voices: Justice requires having eyes that see

March 22, 2021

Suzii Paynter March describes how justice involves being able to see below the surface of a person’s life and circumstances.