

Voices: Justice looks like hope, not hopelessness

October 7, 2020

Facing a swarm of justice-related issues, Nell Green calls followers of Jesus to work together to overcome hopelessness with creativity, boldness and faith.

Voices: Justice for immigrants and refugees seldom seen

October 7, 2020

Marv Knox explains why many seek asylum at the U.S.-Mexico border and how their efforts to find justice have become more difficult.

Voices: Justice looks like making things right

October 7, 2020

Dr. John Ogletree defines justice with the Old Testament word “mishpat” and outlines a path leading to justice, with the church as its primary advocate.

Voices: Justice through the eyes of an Arab Israeli Christian

October 7, 2020

Being an Arab who is an Israeli citizen who is an evangelical Christian is complicated. And it makes for a poignant view of justice.

Voices: Living God's kingdom justice where you are

October 7, 2020

In light of the biblical call and Jesus' own example, Dr. Tony Miranda challenges readers to embody kingdom justice for all people.

Voices: Right now, justice looks like righteous anger in action

October 7, 2020

Dr. Froswa' Booker-Drew considers the place of anger in responding to injustice by looking at Jesus' response and the biblical injunction to love others.

Voices: Justice looks like fighting for children's best interests

October 7, 2020

Alyssa Ross, a public school teacher, describes justice from the vantage point of adoption and public and special education.

Voices: Justice is providing excellent education for all

October 7, 2020

Charles Foster Johnson, founder and executive director of Pastors for Texas Children and co-pastor of Bread Fellowship in Fort Worth, proposes that justice looks like providing quality education for all children everywhere.

Voices: What justice looks like in the New Testament

October 7, 2020

Dr. Stephen Reid, professor of Christian Scriptures at Baylor University's Truett Seminary, examines justice as seen in the Good Samaritan and Simon of Cyrene.

Voices: What justice looks like in the Old Testament

October 7, 2020

Timothy Pierce, associate professor of Christian studies at East Texas Baptist University, examines how justice is described in the Old Testament.

Voices: ‘Justice looks like ...’: A special series on justice

October 7, 2020

Editor Eric Black announces a special series in the Voices column dedicated to an extended conversation about justice from numerous perspectives.