

Voices: Brueggemann: Sacred, salty and still speaking

June 5, 2025

Chris Seay, lead pastor of Ecclesia Houston, gives tribute to Walter Brueggemann, whose views of prophetic literature shaped many.

Voices: Hanna: From solo to sold out

June 5, 2025

“Hanna’s name means ‘gracious.’ She is gracious to others, for she has received the grace God gives,” her childhood pastor explains.

Voices: Weighing our values and actions

June 5, 2025

Suzii Paynter March cites three bills considered by the 89th Texas Legislature as examples of times when Christians put faith into action.

Voices: Not neutral, but independent

June 5, 2025

Steve Bezner contends Christians ought to hold to a Third Way, popularized by pastor, theologian and author Tim Keller.

Voices: Did John the Baptist doubt Jesus?

June 5, 2025

Did John the Baptist doubt Jesus while in prison, or was something else going on? Cristian Cervantes explores that question.

Voices: Unity through diversity:

Its impact on theological education

June 5, 2025

“Diversity and many of its associated issues are being criticized unfairly these days. There seems to be confusion about its value and purpose.”

Voices: Remembering spell check during graduation

June 5, 2025

Don Newbury, retired president of Howard Payne University, reflects on graduations and a particular HPU graduate.

Voices: An epidemic of rude behavior making America sick

June 5, 2025

People are on edge everywhere, and it seems to translate more and more into rude behavior. Scott Collins suggests an antidote.

Voices: Ministry lessons I didn't learn in seminary

June 5, 2025

You can learn a lot in seminary, but you can't learn everything. Stacy Conner shares some of what can only be learned "on the job."

Voices: Remembering my mom this Mother's Day

June 5, 2025

Motherhood can be complicated. It's definitely challenging. Ruth Cook tells the story of her relationship with her mom and God's role in it.

Voices: Fruit tree challenge

June 5, 2025

What if every church and every church member bore more fruit ... literally? Johnny Teague issues a challenge to do just that.

Voices: Let's look at the pastoral life

June 5, 2025

Ron Cook considers the calling, the magnificence, the challenges and the perseverance of the pastoral life.